Four men were reported killed when an Army plane from the Lockbourne Army Air Base exploded in midair and crashed in flames on a field on the Clinton B. Teegardin farm, known as the Oakland farm, six miles north of Ashville, about 12:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Pickaway County Sheriff Charles Radcliff said he was notified of the tragedy, which occurred in Madison township, Pickaway county, a mile from the village of St. Paul and the sheriff said he was leaving immediately for the scene with Coroner Lloyd Jones. The plane was believed to be an Army bomber although this was not definitely learned.

The four men killed were presumably Army personnel and their identity was not immediately learned.

Wreckage from the blazing plane was reportedly strewn over a considerable area.

Solon Fears Inspection By UN Would Not Reveal Germ Warfare Studies

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Sen. Hatch (D) N. M., said today that he fears even United Nations inspection might not ferret out hidden laboratories producing enough bacteria for devastating germ warfare by an aggression-bent nation.

Hatch declared there should be nothing short of thorough world disarmament, with international tribunals to decide disputes between nations on the basis of an international code of laws.

The senator who witnessed the Bikini bomb test as an observer for President Truman said he is in accord with the efforts to outlaw the atomic bomb—"but not at all satisfied with merely doing that." He said:

PERSIA TROOPS CROSS BORDER

Russia Is Expected Not To Ignore Latest Moves
In Iran

LONDON, Dec. 10.—An official announcement by the Iranian government declared today that Persian troops have crossed the border of Azerbaijan province and are meeting "little resistance."

Tehran reports reaching Paris quoted the pro-Soviet newspaper "Irrania" as warning that Russia could not remain indifferent to the Iranian "civil war."

Premier Ahmed Ghavam said the government troops are moving in three columns toward Tabriz capital of semi-autonomous Azerbaijan.

The areas of Niruzabad and Jamalabad already have been occupied and a third column, advancing from Kurdistan, has reached Mainbulagh. Kurdish tribesmen are accompanying the troops.

Secret, camouflaged radio stations, as well as hidden arms and ammunition, were reported found in Mazandaran province. Martial law was established and a curfew imposed.

Premier Ghavam reiterated that the government forces were covering all parts of Azerbaijan to "supervise" forthcoming elections. He said:

"The government does not intend to bring bloodshed but, on the other hand, it cannot remain quiet in a case where public security and independence are endangered."

Iranian troops have been stationed on the border for more than a week and there have been recurring reports by the Tabriz radio that pitched battles were in progress after alleged frontier crossings.

LEWIS BLOCKS U. S. HOPE OF FREEING MINES

UMW Chieftain Does Not Feel
He Suffered Defeat In Court Action

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—John L. Lewis appeared today to have thoroughly upset the administration's hope for a speedy end to government management of the bituminous coal industry.

One top-ranking official said "it is now impossible for the government to get out of the coal business any time soon."

The official said Lewis' action in sending the miners back to work until next March 31 set a deadline which the government can't ignore.

Release of the mines, he said, would give the appearance that the government was "running out on the situation" after having decreed a finish fight with the UMW chieftain.

The only hope for ending federal seizure of the industry lies in negotiation of a wage agreement between the union and private operators, the administration spokesman added.

Industry representatives indicated, however, that the mine owners are in no mood to talk terms with Lewis pending a supreme court ruling on his contempt conviction. They also fear that if Lewis wins his appeal "he'll be tougher than ever to deal with."

The operators also were keeping their eyes on capitol hill where a new Republican congress convenes next month. Sen. Taft, (R) Ohio, who may head the senate labor committee, has advocated congressional enactment of reform labor legislation before the coal strike expires.

The supreme court set the coal case for argument Jan. 14. Its decision will determine whether Lewis and the UMW will have to pay $3,510,000 in fines for violating a district court order against the recent 17-day mine shutdown.

The coal walkout just concluded has so depleted the nation's fuel supply that the government cannot risk another winter shutdown by premature action in stepping out of the coal business.

Friends of Lewis said the UMW (Continued on Page Two)

The UN general assembly convenes in two plenary sessions today to consider the recommendations forwarded by committees and sub-committees for final, definitive action.

The assembly is still heading for an adjournment goal of Dec. 14. If any secondary issues are still undetermined by that date, many of the delegation leaders are expected to sail on the Queen Elizabeth any way and leave subordinates to tie up loose ends next week.

Two of the chief issues are likely to be Franco Spain and disarmament. A committee has voted to withdraw all ambassadors and ministers of United Nations members from Madrid and leave only charges d'affaires in their legations.

On disarmament, the questions of an inventory on troops and the order of working toward a convention for arms control are on the agenda.

Tragic Fire Survivor Out Of Hospital

After spending almost 7 months in Berger hospital Curtis Lee Cox, 5, who was seriously burned May 28 in a trailer house fire at Williamsport in which his little sister and brother were fatally burned, left the institution Monday afternoon. Hospital attaches said the lad's condition was "good."

The boy was placed in the temporary custody of John Kerns, probation officer for the Pickaway county juvenile court. Following the fire his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carey Cox, moved to Washington C. H.

Four of the six Cox children were burned in the fire which destroyed the trailer home. Earnest Eugene, 9, and Delores Gene, 2, died. Woodrow Nelson, 7, was slightly burned.

The parents were away from home at the time and the blaze followed an explosion which occurred when the eldest child, Earnest, decided to pop some corn. Aiming to kindle a fire in the stove the boy poured kerosene into the stove. The resultant blast sprayed the flaming fluid over the trailer.

'OUTSIDE' WORLD IS TOO COMPLEX FOR EX-CONVICT

OAKLAND, Cal., Dec. 10.—For 75-year-old William Shannon today prison life seemed more secure than the "outside world"—a world he hasn't lived in for the past three decades.

Thirty-one years ago he entered the state prison at Folsom for second degree murder. In his prison cell he missed two world wars and two depressions.

Then last July Shannon was paroled. He found shelter at the Little Sisters of the Poor home in Oakland.

But life on "the outside" seemed too complex. It was a strange world—too strange.

So last night Bill Shannon walked into a small Oakland restaurant, armed with a toy pistol. Halfheartedly he told the waitress to hand over the money in the cash register.

Neither did he put up a struggle when a customer easily overpowered him.

Bill Shannon's toy pistol clattered to the floor and shattered. He seemed happy as police officers led him away to jail. Simply, and with the relief in his voice, Shannon told his captors:

"Prison life is the only life I know. I want to get back. This seemed the way."

HIGHEST INCOME MARK REACHED

$14,763,000,000 Is Paid To Individuals In October,
All-Time High

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The commerce department announced today that individual incomes reached an all-time high of $14,763,000,000 in October.

October's record high was $446,000,000 above income during the previous month and represented a rise in the income index from 246.6 in September to 256.1. The index is based on the 1935-39 average which represents 100.

The October index was almost seven per cent above the average of 1945 and more than one per cent above the previous high, August.

Income payments to individuals include wages and salaries, net incomes of unincorporated business of both firm and non-firm, dividends and interests, net rents received by landlords and other types of individual incomes.

Chief factor of the October increase, the department said, was agricultural income. It pointed out that "higher prices in a decontrolled market brought forth greatly increased marketings to boost cash income from crop and livestock sales to new peak levels."

On the other hand, it added, "gains in factory payrolls and disbursements by trade establishments were almost offset by continued decline of military payments and federal civilian payrolls."

NEW VITAMIN TO AID SUFFERERS FROM ANEMIA

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 10.—Dr. John R. Totter, assistant professor of biochemistry at the University of Arkansas gave hope today to sufferers of pernicious anemia.

Dr. Totter disclosed that a new vitamin, originally called vitamin M but now termed folic acid, has been used successfully in the treatment of pernicious anemia.

He indicated that the substance, found in the river growth and green leafy vegetables, also may prove successful in treating a low blood count of white blood corpuscles caused by radiation of the type produced in atomic explosions.

State Of Union Message To

BY ROBERT G. NIXON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—President Truman will present the new congress with the strongest possible request for extraordinary powers to curb future strikes that threaten the nation's economy.

The chief executive will make a personal appearance before a joint session of the Republican-dominated congress in early January when the lawmakers reconvene.

Mr. Truman's request for strike-curbing legislation will be a major part of his state of the union message to the house and senate.

The President's determination to seek a means by which the executive branch of the government can handle effectively strikes of nationwide impact has been crystallized by the crisis brought about by the soft coal walkout.

This year's state of the union message will be comparatively brief. It will deal in great measure with the economic forces that have arisen during the past 12 months.

Strikes Main Topic
Much of it will deal with the series of major strike threats in industries that control the nation's economic life.

A good part of what Mr. Truman planned to tell the nation Sunday night before John L. Lewis called off the coal walkout will be embodied in a presidential message to the congress. Barring a new strike crisis between now and early January, the President does not plan to present his views on recurring strike threats before he makes his appearance on capitol hill.

Troops Condemned
The presidential view of the soft coal walkout is the same he took of the threatened nationwide railroad strike last Spring. The White House views such a work stoppage as a strike against the government itself. Mr. Truman believes that strikes of such a nature that affect the nation's entire economy cannot be tolerated. ACHESON SAYS GIFTS TO SOME NATIONS NEEDED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson said today that it may be necessary to ask congress to make outright relief grants for certain needy nations of Europe.

Acheson's statement came at a news conference when he was questioned for further details on his recent speech on American relief policy.

In that talk he declared the United States would not provide relief to finance large armies in any power, the manufacture of armaments or local socialization programs.

Applicants for relief also, Acheson said today, naturally would have to be in such a poor financial condition that they were unable to finance their own relief programs by exports or loans. He described Italy, Austria and Greece as countries likely to meet these specifications.

L'Humanite added that until recently the prisoners were permitted the freedom of the docks, to one of which the former Europa was tied by steel cables.

Other quarters reported that the prisoners "watched interestedly" from the wharfs as the ship, formerly owned by their country, settled to the bottom.

He was asked whether the administration planned to ask congress for the authority to make grants or loans in providing relief.

He quickly answered that while congress would have to determine that question, it boiled down to the same thing, since a loan to a nation in such a poor financial condition would be tantamount to a grant.

Solon Fears Inspection By UN Would Not Reveal Germ Warfare Studies

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—Sen. Hatch (D) N. M., said today that he fears even United Nations inspection might not ferret out hidden laboratories producing enough bacteria for devastating germ warfare by an aggression-bent nation.

Hatch declared there should be nothing short of thorough world disarmament, with international tribunals to decide disputes between nations on the basis of an international code of laws.

The senator who witnessed the Bikini bomb test as an observer for President Truman said he is in accord with the efforts to outlaw the atomic bomb—"but not at all satisfied with merely doing that." He said:

"I am not convinced that inspection can adequately protect the world against production of bacteria for warfare, or against making of other agencies of death."

Hatch pointed out that vast amounts of bacteria with which a country secretly preparing for aggression could conduct far-reaching germ warfare could be produced in a laboratory too small to be easily detected.

He added that rockets also can be assembled in small plants. He pointed out that the White Sands, N. M., base is a comparatively small establishment.

The New Mexico advocate of disarmament and international co-operation declared:

"Other now-known instruments of war can be used with almost as destructive effects as the A-bomb itself."

"There can be no safety anywhere in the world unless war itself is relegated to that age of barbarism whence it came."

OPA HOPES TO INCREASE SUGAR RATIONS SOON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—The OPA announced today that it may be able to increase the present consumer sugar ration early next year.

A consumer stamp for the regular ration of five pounds of sugar for each four months will become valid Jan. 1. However, the agency "anticipates" that a second stamp will be made valid before the end of the first four-month period on April 30.

At the same time, the agency announced that industrial and institutional sugar allotments for the first quarter of 1947 will remain unchanged from those granted for the last quarter of this year.

OPA said today's announcement was based on a department of agriculture civilian sugar allocation of one million, 260,000 short tons for the period beginning Jan. 1 and ending March 31, 1947.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—John L. Lewis appeared today to have thoroughly upset the administration's hope for a speedy end to government management of the bituminous coal industry.

The official said Lewis' action in sending the miners back to work until next March 31 set a deadline which the government can't ignore.

Release of the mines, he said, would give the appearance that the government was "running out on the situation" after having decreed a finish fight with the U. M. W. chieftain.

The only hope for ending federal seizure of the industry lies in negotiation of a wage agreement between the union and private operators, the administration spokesman added.

FEDERAL - STATE HIGHWAY PLANS ARE APPROVED

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 10—State Highway Director Perry T. Ford announced today approval by the public roads administration of a $9,283,748 federal-aid highway program for 1947.

Ford said the approved program included one statewide highway planning survey project and 18 construction projects. The PRA is expected to furnish $4,620,748 of the funds with the state legislature appropriating an equal amount.

Two of the projects submitted were approved pending further discussion. Ford said additional 1947 primary projects were under design to use the entire available federal allocation of $7,893,255. He added that these were withheld until price trends can be determined.

Ford disclosed that alternate projects are also under design as substitutes if critical materials hold up awards of original contracts.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 10—The second attempted "break" within a month by federal prisoners held in the Columbus city jail was foiled today as a cell block guard discovered a rope, made of strips torn from a mattress cover, hidden in a cell.

Patrolman Blueford Malone reported he discovered the rope under the mattress of John H. Mills, of Pittsburgh, a ringleader in the November 13 escape attempt. Mills is awaiting trial on Dyer act (interstate auto theft) charges.

Inspector Thomas J. Scully theorized that Mills intended to lower the 50-foot rope from his cell window to the ground, where an accomplice would tie weapons to it to be hoisted through the bars. Federal officials were called into the case.

Pickaway county chapter of the reserve officers association was organized at a meeting held in the court house Monday night.

William D. Radcliff was elected president of the new group which is affiliated with the national officers organization. Donald Collins was named vice president and Jack Clifton, secretary-treasurer.

There are at present 16 members in the group and it is hoped that the membership will grow to at least 45 soon. Officers explained that the organization is open to all reserve officers in Pickaway county who served in the Army, Navy, Marines, Air Force and all other branches of service. Reserve officers wishing to join are asked to contact officers of the organization.

Monthly meetings are planned and members are working on several projects for the future.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—President Truman will present the new congress with the strongest possible request for extraordinary powers to curb future strikes that threaten the nation's economy.

congress for broad powers to handle strikes that are threatened or occur in any industry that would present a national emergency. Coal and the railroads are two of the industries that fit into such a category.

Would Preserve Gains

The President feels that labor's gains must be preserved. At the same time, he believes firmly that situations which arose in the railroad strike threat last Spring and the coal work stoppage just ended must not be permitted.

To handle such situations, consideration is being given to a request for legislation that would give the President power to:

1. Authorize injunctive or mandatory proceedings against any union leader forbidding him from encouraging or inciting members of a union to leave their work or to refuse to return to work, subjecting him to contempt proceedings for failure to obey an order of a court.

2. Provide criminal penalties against employers and union leaders who violate the provisions of such an act.

3. Deprive of their seniority rights workers who, without good cause, persist in striking against the government.

Such powers would be effective only in cases where the government has taken over an industry in an effort to halt a strike.

JAP NEWSPAPERS WARN LITTLE CAN BE EXPECTED

TOKYO, Dec. 10—Japanese newspapers warned the people of Japan today that the best they could hope for after allied reparations are set is "a not too miserable level of living."

The Tokyo newspaper Mainichi, with more than 3,500,000 circulation nationally, pointed out there was little chance of the Pauley reparations plan being altered materially because it was based on fact-finding.

The equally large newspaper Asahi published a long list of figures showing how far Japan's industry will be reduced and emphasized that production levels probably will fall to those of years when Japan's population was 30 million less than now.

Your Home
By Frances Ainsworth

During the past week I've been very busy experimenting with the new emergency flour. I've tried all my favorite recipes and had reasonably good results.

Many women have asked me if the new flour makes good cakes and other pastries. Well, it does! And, with the exception of fancy cakes and pastries, I've discovered that all my usual recipes may be used. Of course, the new emergency flour doesn't give quite the fine texture and body that our customary white flour does, but good cakes and pastries can be baked with it.

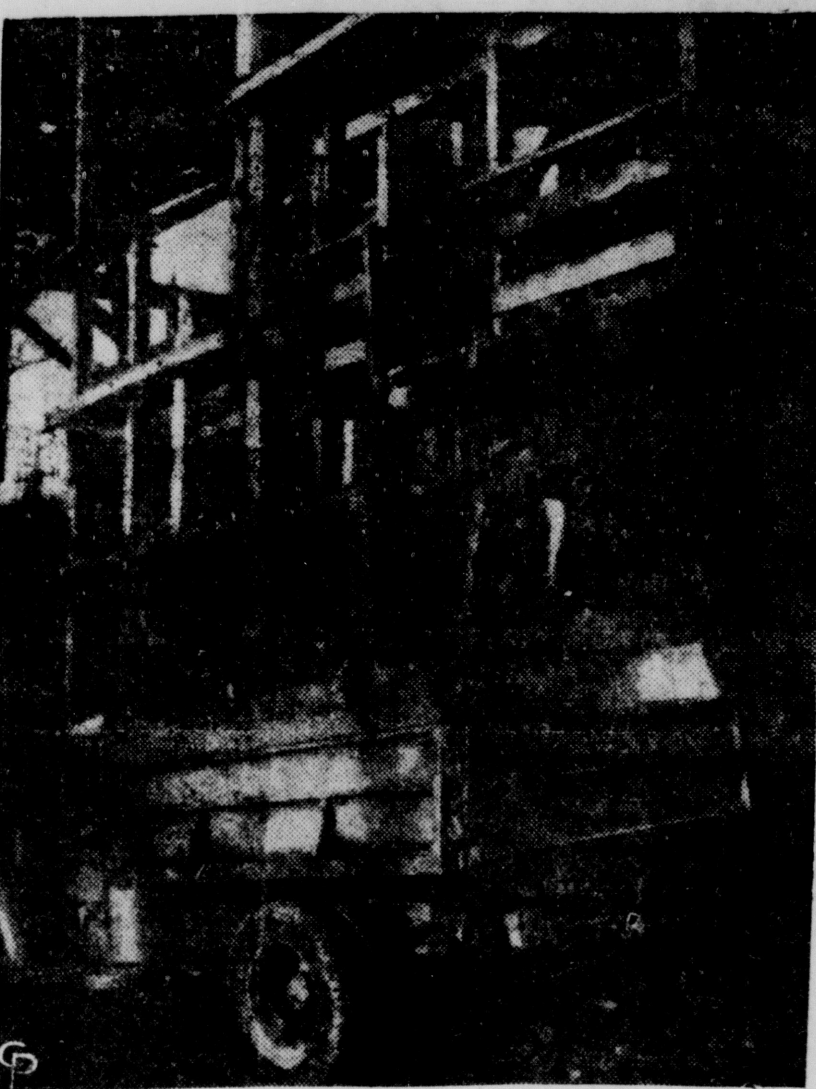

I've had good luck with one cake recipe—and I thought you might like to have it:

2 cups sifted enriched flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup milk

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cream together shortening and extract until light and fluffy. Add eggs, beating well until creamy. Add vanilla extract. Add about 1/2 cup mixture. Mix. Add remaining 1/2 cup milk, mixing well. Add remaining 1/2 cup mixture. Mix. Pour batter into two lined eight-inch cake pans. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) about 25 to 30 minutes.

When you cover that cake with your favorite icing, you'll be surprised at the speed with which your family will gobble it up. I've already baked four cakes with the new emergency flour, and I can tell you that it works—if you follow the recipe carefully. With emergency flour you must be sure to do that. Otherwise, you may not achieve complete success.

radio told of an alleged large-scale battle in which casualties were heavy on both sides.

Jafar Pishevari, former "premier" of Azerbaijan and leader of the province's democratic party, broadcast that the Azerbaijanis would "protect our freedom by arms." Pishevari declared:

"Our youths are merely awaiting instructions to march to Tehran and hoist our national flag on the parliament flag staff."

The government claimed that Azerbaijan troops launched several attacks against government forces on the frontier before the general advance was ordered.

Thus far, little fighting has been reported from the interior. The government said, a number of Azerbaijanis surrendered without fighting.

Helpful Hints

Tomato juice becomes more tasty when it is allowed to stand for several hours with some chopped onion, basil and tarragon. Before serving, strain it, then serve cold with lemon or lime.

To clean nickel fixtures, wash with soapy water, then apply a fine scouring powder or metal polish and let dry. Polish with a soft cloth. Corrosion may be removed with vinegar or lemon juice.

To clean old pieces of pewter, put the pieces in boiling or very hot water in which a lump of common washing soda has been thoroughly dissolved. Do not boil, but allow the pieces to soak for a few hours if necessary, repeating the process if once is not enough. Dry and polish with a good metal polisher. If the pewter is corroded, do not try to clean it at home, but take it to an expert on metal cleaning.

SHIP EXPLODES IN MIDAIR OVER TEEGARDIN FARM

crashed seconds later in a field a quarter of a mile away.

Other witnesses reported that the plane had exploded in mid-air before the crash and then exploded again after plunging into the ground. The plane was demolished and wreckage was strewn over a wide area.

The plane was believed to have taken off a short time earlier from the Lockbourne Army air base, six and a half miles north of the scene.

State highway patrolmen, sheriff's deputies and emergency equipment from the Lockbourne base rushed to the scene immediately. They were called by Mrs. Crook when she heard the crash.

Mrs. Paul Teegardin, on a neighboring farm, said she heard an explosion, ran from the house, and saw the plane in the air. It was in flames she said, as she watched it plunge downward. There was another sound like an explosion but, Mrs. Teegardin said, this may have been caused by the blazing craft striking the ground.

Lockbourne officials said the plane was a B-25. They confirmed that four persons were aboard, the pilot, co-pilot and two passengers.

chief definitely does not share the public feeling that he suffered a resounding setback in his battle with the government. They said the UMW president will continue his fight and considers the first-round loss "just a part of tactics."

Meantime, the American Federation of Labor devoted the entire December issue of "labor's monthly survey" to a presentation of the miners' case for higher wages and better working conditions.

The AFL publication placed responsibility for the mine shutdown on Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug, government operator of the mines, but said "the coal operators are not without blame in the strike situation."

The survey cited financial statistics showing the seven large coal companies increased their profits 35 per cent in the first nine months of 1946, despite a 59-day strike last Spring, in comparison with earnings during the same months of 1945.

The AFL publication said coal miners face greater hazards than any other industry yet they earn only $11.85 for a nine-hour day underground against $15.67 for a longshoreman, $14.25 to $16.91 for a truck driver, and $19 to $21.35 for an electrical worker.

'AMERICAN WAY' ON TRIAL FARM LEADER SAYS

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 10—The president of the American Farm Bureau federation today urged an economy of abundant production unimpeded by labor strife in order to bring a higher standard of living.

Edward A. O'Neal, in an address prepared for delivery at the opening session of the Farm Bureau's annual meeting, warned that the American way of life is on trial.

"If so-called free enterprise is to be maintained and is to prevail permanently in this country, it must be truly free. No monopolies—in industry, in labor, in agriculture—can be tolerated unless rigidly controlled."

The Farm Bureau president pointed out that only through huge enterprises can the nation achieve low-cost production, but added:

"It does not follow if an institution is big, that it is therefore a monopoly."

O'Neal declared an "outraged public opinion" in this country will demand effective action by congress to prevent strikes and their "disastrous disruption of essential services." He said:

"The strike is really a jungle weapon. It savors of the tooth-and-claw philosophy rather than the philosophy of the Golden rule. It is literally too expensive to the nation to be tolerated in the extremes that we have witnessed during 1946"

ALLIS-CHALMERS PLANT SCENE OF 'WORST' RIOT

75 Injured And 56 Arrested
When Demonstrators
Attack Workers

WEST ALLIS Wis., Dec. 10—Police held 56 CIO demonstrators in court action today following the worst riot so far experienced in the seven months history of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing company, strike at West Allis.

The riot, latest in a series at the big farm equipment plant recently, was touched off late yesterday when 2,500 non-striking production workers began leaving for their homes at the end of the day's work.

Police said the casualties were heavy. More than 75 persons were injured during the rioting, 22 of them law enforcement officers.

Two automobiles belonging to workers leaving the plant were overturned and caught fire. Scores of other automobiles were damaged by rocks.

Sheriff George Hanley said the riot was the worst of the strike to date, and added:

"We managed to handle it but if it was any worse I don't know what would have happened."

Hanley hinted he may ask Gov. Walter S. Goodland for the help of state troops today.

Police Lt. Walter McCaigue, who was in charge of the 300 deputies and police at the riot scene, said the demonstrators were incited to violence by a speaker in a sound truck.

McCaigue said the man in the sound truck shouted out the badge numbers of police officers and urged the demonstrators to "get" certain police and deputies.

McCaigue said some of the demonstrators were armed with slingshots and used large marbles as missiles which they rained on the line of automobiles, the non-striking and the police.

DETROIT RESTAURANT EMPLOYEES GO ON STRIKE

DETROIT, Dec. 10—An estimated three thousand Detroit restaurant workers called a "surprise" walkout today leaving thousands of downtown office workers without breakfast.

The strikers, members of local 234 and 705, AFL, closed most of the other major eating places.

Picket lines encircled all strike-bound restaurants and would-be customers were told "no breakfast this morning."

Fred Simonsen, president of Greenfields, said his company has been negotiating with the union for a long time but cannot meet the demands without increasing prices.

SOIL CONSERVATION IS STUDIED AT PMA MEETING

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 10—Methods of fighting soil depletion and erosion were outlined today at the second and concluding session of a conference called by the production and marketing administration.

Elmer F. Kruse, state director of PMA, urged farmers to participate in the federally-sponsored agricultural conservation program.

Heavy cropping in the six war years has increased the need for soil conservation, he stated. Farmers are now permitted to select their own conservation practice for their individual counties.

A total of $7,399,000 has been allocated to Ohio for the program in 1947.

POSSIBLE CAUSE OF FIRE FOUND

Disastrous Atlanta Hotel Blaze May Have Been Started By Cigaret

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 10—Investigation of the Winecoff hotel fire which cost 120 lives today pointed toward the possibility that the fire began when a cigaret was thrown carelessly on a mattress on the third floor.

The mattress was found near a storeroom which was only 10 feet from the stairway which wound around the elevator shaft of the 15-story building, scene of America's worst hotel fire early Saturday.

A. C. Hutson, assistant chief engineer of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, who is investigating the blaze, said the stairway acted like a funnel, sucking the flames through the upper stories of the hotel with almost incredible speed.

Hutson, testifying before a board of fire marshals and a city council committee last night, asserted there is definite evidence that the fire started on the third floor.

He also revealed that remnants of the mattress were found on the floor and that a lighted cigaret might have ignited it and started the blaze.

Hutson declared there was no doubt that lack of a fire-proof stairwell that would have confined the fire to the third floor was responsible for the blaze engulfing the upper portion of the hotel.

Eye witnesses testified as to the speed with which the flames brought death to many of the hotel's 280 guests.

Comer L. Rowan, a night auditor at the hotel, told the investigating board that he saw bodies of guests plummet to the street while he was turning in the first alarm by telephone.

Fire Marshal Harry Phillips said he was informed the flames spread so rapidly that members of a fire station 600 feet away also saw guests jump into the street.

Firemen said the bodies of those who leaped had to be moved before they were able to get fire apparatus in position to attack the roaring flames.

GREEK PREMIER SAYS HE IS NOT IN U. S. TO BEG

Tsaldaris Claims He Is Here To Seek Square Deal For War-Devastated Nation

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
INS Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Dec. 10—Premier Constantin Tsaldaris of Greece said today he has come to the United Nations not to beg but to appeal for a square deal for his war-torn country.

Greece wants:
1. Immediate financial assistance to enable her to build and check the spread of Communism.
2. Rectification of her borders to prevent future conflict.

In an exclusive interview, the prime minister stressed that he is not here with his hat in his hand but to appeal to the United Nations that Greece be treated "as a friend and an ally" who proved her mettle in the early phases of the war when the chips were down.

The stocky, gray-haired, 61-year old Tsaldaris said with pride in his voice that he has come as the representative of a nation which fought off Mussolini's stab in the back and disrupted Hitler's timetable so badly that the whole picture of World War II changed and made the allied victory possible. He will appear before the United Nations this week.

"Greece wants to find a means to obtain as rapidly as possible the reparations due her, not a loan," said Tsaldaris. "Greece cannot wait. We've got to rehabilitate quickly to prevent the spread of Communism."

"We also insist upon a rectification of our northern border to prevent a future invasion of our country. Under present conditions, Greece could be invaded within 24 hours."

Prime Minister Tsaldaris pointed out that Greece paid a tragic price during the war. Her population was reduced from eight million in 1940 to seven million in 1944.

The Greek army was virtually wiped out. Military casualties totalled 518,000 dead, 880,000 disabled.

Tsaldaris said that during the war and occupation, Greece lost her entire economic wealth: ports, bridges, railways, every means of communication and transportation, cattle, machinery and agricultural equipment in general.

Her land was razed and destroyed, and the health of her people weakened. The fact so many people are poor and homeless gives the Communists an opportunity to "stir things up," according to Tsaldaris.

He said in reply to a question that the strength of the Communists in Greece was "no more than 10 to 12 per cent," adding that this was an "international estimate."

He said he feared Communism was increasing in his country.

The present unrest in Greece is by no means a "civil war," he asserted, adding:

"It is a war between Communist hands—supported by our northern red totalitarian neighbors—and the democratic law of my country."

He said the bands operating in Greece do not include Greek Communists only—but foreign Communists as well "who find their sources of supplies and headquarters in these foreign countries."

Tsaldaris said the present regime in Greece represents democracy because it was recently elected by a free and democratic process which was supervised by American, British and French observers.

According to Tsaldaris, a United Nations sub-committee estimated that $1,100,000,000 are required for the basic construction of Greece.

Yet, he asserted, the external support Greece has received for its reconstruction has been "rather minor."

PLANS MADE FOR EXPANDING OHIO FOREST PROGRAM

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 10—Plans for a two million dollar endowment to finance an intensive forestry research and education program were mapped today by the Ohio Forestry association.

John H. Byrne, of Cleveland, who was named chairman of the endowment committee, told the association's board of directors that the fund would be used to study management of wooded farmplots and for more complete utilization of forest products and elimination of waste in timber production.

President George H. Lasher, of Rutland, pointed out that 75 per cent of Ohio's forest land is privately owned and asserted that income could be quadrupled by selective cutting practices and proper management.

The association, which will hold its annual meeting in Columbus January 15 and 16, hopes to have 10,000 members by the end of next year and 25,000 by the end of 1948.

OSU FACULTY MEMBERS TO REQUEST WAGE BOOST

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 10—A committee of nine faculty members of Ohio State university will be named this week to present the demand of the university's chapter of the AFL American Federation of teachers for a 60 per cent increase in the university budget.

The committee will outline its proposal to President Howard L. Bevis and the board of trustees.

"We're seeking a 60 per cent budget increase and not a flat pay raise," insisted the union's chapter president, Dr. C. B. Mendenhall.

He added that a budget increase would permit the elimination of present salary "inequalities" and still permit a general pay increase.

STOLEN AUTO RECOVERED FROM ABANDONED QUARRY

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 10—One stolen car was recovered and another was being sought by sheriff's deputies today in the 35-foot-deep waters of an abandoned state quarry just northwest of Columbus.

The deputies dragged the quarry after a fisherman noticed the outlines of what appeared to be two cars from the 60-foot-high bank. The convertible coupe recovered was the new car of Virgil Hamilton, who reported it stolen Sept. 7, the day after he bought it.

INDUSTRY HAS CHANCE TO END HOME SHORTAGE

Business Passed Challenge With Firing Of Wyatt, End Of Controls

BY KENNETH L. DIXON
INS Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—It is seldom that a complex situation in this confused capital city can be boiled down to the point where the issues and goals involved become completely clear.

It is a pleasure to be able to report one such situation today to the house-hungry veterans across the land.

If, during 1947, more than a million new housing units are placed under construction at reasonable prices, you can thank several real estate, building, construction, loan and finance groups which are well represented here in Washington.

If not, — other economic factors remaining roughly the same — it is on them that you can place the blame.

For nearly a year now, they have fought vigorously and well for the ousting of national housing expediter Wilson W. Wyatt and his veterans emergency housing program.

They have accused him of hampering the construction of new homes, rather than helping it. They have charged him with continuing the national housing crisis rather than relieving it. They have blamed his "complex regulations," construction priorities, rent controls and other restrictions for continued existence of the housing emergency.

Their fight has been successful. Even when they failed to oust Wyatt in the early stages of the battle, still they managed to halt passage of the Wagner-Elender-Taft measure — or any similar bill — which Wyatt and his aides thought essential for easing the shortage.

Now their pressure has been great enough to force the resignation of Wyatt, and to eliminate many phases of his program.

Thus, they have asked for the ball — and gotten it.

Two of the leading organizations which have lobbied long and loudly for elimination of Wyatt's position and his veterans emergency housing program already have started down the field.

Lauding President Truman's acceptance of the Wyatt resignation, the National Association of Real Estate Boards is striking now to abolish rent controls. Said executive vice-president Herbert U. Nelson of Chicago, "now is the time to get rid of rent control for good and all. If we do, there will be plenty of new homes built for veterans and others."

The National Association of Home Builders announced that, far from "scuttling the veterans' housing program," President Truman's action in relieving it "of many unnecessary controls should clear the road for faster building of veterans' homes."

Noting that several veterans' groups expressed alarm at Wyatt's resignation and the implied abandonment of his program, President Joseph Meyerhoff of Baltimore said that it "should result in building more houses for veterans in less time. The complex system of federal controls that developed under the Wyatt program actually hampered completion of homes instead of helping it. Veterans should feel relieved, not alarmed."

Through their press relations men here in Washington, these and other building, real estate and finance groups stressed that more vital home production can be expected with the abandonment of regulations — for which they have long fought.

One well-known spokesman for these groups said flatly that the shortage would be whipped if the government would "eliminate all controls and price ceilings now burdening down home construction and let private enterprise have a green light for unhindered full speed ahead."

Presumably what is left of the housing controls and ceilings will be abandoned — for all practical purposes — ere long. Already, with the parent root chopped off, many of them are dying on the vine.

Naturally, it goes without saying that those who supported Wyatt and his program feel that all the foregoing criticisms have been falsely, or at least mistakenly, stated, and that the program has been a success.

Those people, however, have been defeated by the two organizations mentioned above and various associated groups.

Therefore, on those who successfully fought Wyatt and his program now falls full responsibility for easing the housing shortage. The credit or the blame must go to them, and this first fact must be faced:

During this year 1946, approximately one million low or average cost housing units have been placed under construction while Wyatt's program was in progress. It was a record-breaking accomplishment. Nevertheless, even Wyatt admits the housing emergency is far from whipped.

Obviously Wyatt's program could improve that record next year. Therefore, the men who ousted him and much of his program must do a great deal better to fully justify their accusations

INDUSTRY HAS CHANCE TO END HOME SHORTAGE

Business Passed Challenge With Firing Of Wyatt, End Of Controls

BY KENNETH L. DIXON
INS Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—It is seldom that a complex situation in this confused capital city can be boiled down to the point where the issues and goals involved become completely clear.

It is a pleasure to be able to report one such situation today to the house-hungry veterans across the land.

If, during 1947, more than a million new housing units are placed under construction at reasonable prices, you can thank several real estate, building, construction, loan and finance groups which are well represented here in Washington.

If not, — other economic factors remaining roughly the same — it is on them that you can place the blame.

For nearly a year now, they have fought vigorously and well for the ousting of national housing expediter Wilson W. Wyatt and his veterans emergency housing program.

They have accused him of hampering the construction of new homes, rather than helping it. They have charged him with continuing the national housing crisis rather than relieving it. They have blamed his "complex regulations," construction priorities, rent controls and other restrictions for continued existence of the housing emergency.

Their fight has been successful. Even when they failed to oust Wyatt in the early stages of the battle, still they managed to halt passage of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft measure—or any similar bill—which Wyatt and his aides thought essential for easing the shortage.

Now their pressure has been great enough to force the resignation of Wyatt, and to eliminate many phases of his program.

Thus, they have asked for the ball—and gotten it.

Two of the leading organizations which have lobbied long and loudly for elimination of Wyatt's position and his veterans emergency housing program already have started down the field.

Lauding President Truman's acceptance of the Wyatt resignation, the National Association of Real Estate Boards is striking now to abolish rent controls. Said executive vice-president Herbert U. Nelson of Chicago, "now is the time to get rid of rent control for good and all. If we do, there will be plenty of new homes built for veterans and others."

The National Association of Home Builders announced that, far from "scuttling the veterans' housing program," President Truman's action in relieving it "of many unnecessary controls should clear the road for faster building of veterans' homes."

Noting that several veterans' groups expressed alarm at Wyatt's resignation and the implied abandonment of his program, President Joseph Meyerhoff of Baltimore said that it "should result in building more houses for veterans in less time. The complex system of federal controls that developed under the Wyatt program actually hampered completion of homes instead of helping it. Veterans should feel relieved, not alarmed."

Through their press relations men here in Washington, these and other building, real estate and finance groups stressed that more vital home production can be expected with the abandonment of regulations—for which they have long fought.

One well-known spokesman for these groups said flatly that the shortage would be whipped if the government would "eliminate all controls and price ceilings now burdening down home construction and let private enterprise have a green light for unhampered full speed ahead."

Presumably what is left of the housing controls and ceilings will be abandoned—for all practical purposes—are long. Already, with the parent root chopped off, many of them are dying on the vine.

Naturally, it goes without saying that those who supported Wyatt and his program feel that all the foregoing criticisms have been falsely, or at least mistakenly, stated, and that the program has been a success.

Those people, however, have been defeated by the two organizations mentioned above and various associated groups.

Therefore, on those who successfully fought Wyatt and his program now falls full responsibility for easing the housing shortage. The credit or the blame must go to them, and this first fact must be faced:

During this year 1946, approximately one million low or average cost housing units have been placed under construction while Wyatt's program was in progress. It was a record-breaking accomplishment. Nevertheless, even Wyatt admits the housing emergency is far from whipped.

Obviously Wyatt's program could improve that record next year. Therefore, the men who ousted him and much of his program must do a great deal better to fully justify their accusations

TYRANNY IN ARGENTINA
ARGENTINA has just taken over one of the worst practices of ancient Roman tyranny. Under the emperor Tiberius an informer could bring a charge of disloyalty against a respected citizen and ensure his arrest and punishment. This practice was known as "delation", from a Latin word meaning "informing." It was pernicious, allowing irresponsible people to get easy revenge for personal grudges.
The new Argentine arrangement sounds suspiciously similar. A bureau has been established under the Ministry of Commerce for Information to deal with "malicious lies." There any signed statement denouncing some one else will be received. As Argentina is totalitarian, punishment is pretty sure to follow denunciation.
This gives Argentina a strong resemblance to the Fascist states.
The Constitution of the United States, Article V and VI of the Bill of Rights, the Ten Original Amendments proposed by Thomas Jefferson, with provision for open and speedy trial, confrontation with witnesses and counsel for defense, protects American citizens against that sort of thing. Argentina needs either new laws or strict application of old ones giving its citizens equal protection. Without such protection, dictatorship flourishes.

WORLD GOVERNMENT
THE idea of a world government as a peace weapon is gaining the attention of many thoughtful Americans. Among them, Justice Owen J. Roberts has drawn up a resolution which was passed by a recent convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church. It calls upon President Truman and the incoming Congress to consider "a stronger world government than the present UN", one where peace is maintained by law involving a legislative body whose representatives will be elected by all nations. Such a body's pronouncements would be interpreted by people's courts in every country. Enforcement of such laws would be in the hands of executives directly answerable to citizens of the various countries.
Whether one agrees in detail with the followers of the Roberts suggestion is not important. The encouraging thing is that people like Mr. Roberts and the Episcopalians are giving serious attention to some plan for world peace. If this object, namely, all nations at peace, is once fixed as essential, the details can be worked out and agreed upon, too.

They used to say women always go by contraries, but now the Russians are stealing their technique.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—The public call for action to protect it against union-made suffering has had—and this is the strange part of it—no leadership whatsoever.

Only one-fourth of the press had reached for congressional leadership by Dec. 1, says a weekly survey of newspaper opinion (Twohey analysis). Only 7 per cent actually gave positive support for Mr. Truman in the Lewis coal strike procedure before the fine, while but 4 per cent more mixed censure and support, and 12 per cent blamed past "blundering administrations" for the trouble (I could name one.) The great remaining bulk wanted to do something fast but did not agree what.

The unions say the public should take it, accepting complete disruption of living even in a general strike (Oakland) or disruption of head in midwinter. Employers, through their National Association of Manufacturers convention leaned backward in modification. Specifically they passed the decision to congress, asking only revision of the Wagner act and abandonment of the closed shop, while mentioning some other things. Senator Byrd urged a special session immediately to act.

But the current official Republican weekly newspaper omits entirely mention of union legislation in a summary of predictions for coming congressional legislation, and clearly attempted no leadership.

The only suggestion list, approximating a remedial program, was offered by Senator Ball, but he received only a "one-sentence mention in the metropolitan press, saying he "also spoke" at the NAM convention and touched points he has advocated before.

This leaderless urge without a leader has grown up naturally as the result of what the unions have done. The public has simply lacked a champion. The issues have long grown out of the stage of employee-employer disputes into the national area involving a whole national economy and livelihood. It is the unions vs. the people and the people have been unled. Furthermore it is only natural public opinion has not centered on a remedial method because a great many defects of law have been noted, and the failure of the unions has been largely one of moral leadership. They have lost human consideration. They have not only become calloused in their tactics to suffering, impositions, and worse, disruptive brutal violations of human rights, but Lewis first challenged the government itself and then the court. You cannot legislate anyone into being decent, sensible or humane. From that fact stems the confusion as to what remedy could be effective.

A first thing then which might be attempted is to awaken union leadership to its moral responsibilities. A White House conference called by the President might or might not be successful in this respect.

The unions themselves have no more constructive leadership than the public, but if they attempted to exert some upon their own people, the best remedy against public suffering and a national breakdown of the economy might thus be put into effect.

FORGET THE VOID SUIT

HAVING a complete blank in the suit bid by your partner is not necessarily a reason for taking out his later call of a No Trump game into a rebiddable minor suit. If you have any appreciable high card strength in the suit or suits not bid by your partner's No Trump try that he has something in it or them—you can forget the void suit. There probably will be enough tricks in your own suit and the unbid places to produce a game. The chance is likely to be better seeking nine tricks that way than hoping for the 11 needed in a minor suit.

North passed that part score bid, feeling properly that he had already done a good deal of talking with one king, one queen and one jack. South thought his own rebid of his higher-ranking suit at such a high level should have been treated by North as an absolute force, and was a bit disgruntled over not being in 5-Diamonds. But later he was glad of it, as a trump lead was followed by his losing two tricks in clubs and one in hearts.

After the last card was played and North knew what 13 cards South had held, he decided it was his turn to criticize. He based his criticism on South's having such strength in the only unbid suit of hearts, saying South should have left the 3-No Trumps in. No matter what East led against that, game would have been as easy as rolling off a log, with a likelihood of one extra trick and possibility of two, depending on the defense and the way North played.

For Tuesday, December 10 THE ASTRAL influences on this day combine to encourage a definite and determined effort to forge ahead to the attainment of cherished goals in the way of productive and progressive lines, as well as in the realization of fond hopes and wishes of a more intimate and personal cast. There is a promising vibration for increasing personal popularity, and advancement.

If It Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is have excellent prospects for forging ahead, with ambitious and lasting objectives in sight, under most benign and expansive influences. Promotion, enhanced prestige and popularity, growth in finance, credit and possessions, together with warning and felicitous developments in the home, professional, social and romantic relations, with much geniality and reassurance is forecast. But an undercurrent of treachery or intrigue bids sagacious, alert and restrained conduct, lest loss, fraud or waste occur.

SYNOPSIS
When Dr. Philip Balder and his wife, Sheila, decided divorce was the only solution to their incompatibility, Sheila, anxious to continue her business career in St. Louis, agreed Philip could have custody of their five-year-old daughter, Mary, who had lived in Colorado Springs with Sheila's mother since she was two. Philip, happy to have his small daughter again, came to Denver to be the associate of Dr. Somers, but Mary, thoroughly spoiled by her grandmother, presents a problem to kindly Mrs. Lane, at whose boarding house they live. Among the Lane's other guests are attractive Anne Bowman and her friend, Jean Fay, owners of a local beauty shop; Roddy Malone, with whom Jean is in love, and elderly Mr. Grey. Had it not been for Anne's sympathetic understanding of Mary's problems, Philip would have had a difficult time curbing his unruly offspring.

Sally, Mrs. Lane's married daughter, leaves her small son, Billy, with her mother while she does some necessary shopping, and Mary, jealous of Philip's attention to the boy, provokes a fight with him.

CHAPTER NINE
PHILIP was still discouraged as he sat at his desk considering the report on a routine examination he had given a patient of Dr. Somers. In a man of that age, of course, you could usually find something... a splintering of the Q R S wave in the electrocardiogram, an accentuated aortic, a pressure of 170 over 95... He glanced up as Dr. Somers came in the room.

"I thought you'd gone, Philip," Somers said, dropping down in the chair beside the desk.

"I was just looking this over," Philip answered, laying the paper down.

Somers glanced at it. "What are you going to do with that? Not give it to anybody, I hope?"

Philip sat back with a smile. "Why not?"

"Scare him to death most likely." "Why should it scare a reasonable man?"

"Don't ask me; but it usually does."

"What would you do, tell him he's a hundred per cent?"

"Might as well; make him happy."

"Well, of course," Philip said, "I wasn't thinking of just throwing it at him without any explanations; but if anybody pays me his good money for an examination..."

"You're going to give it to him. All right, go ahead and we'll see how he takes it. Who is it anyway?"

Philip consulted the paper. "Josiah Brown."

"That old hypochondriac? He has been coming to me for examinations for ten years. I always give him a clean bill of health, and he is happy for another year. If you show him that report, he'll engage himself a hospital bed and never leave it likely."

"You wouldn't kid me, would you?" Philip asked suspiciously.

"Absolutely not. You probably think you've met up with some queer specimens, but I guarantee you'll never encounter a queerer one than Josiah N. Brown."

Philip was confirmed in his suspicion that Dr. Somers had not, on the whole, a great deal of respect for the human race, as such; and that his refusal to tell his patients the truth was based less on mercy than on a contemptuous conviction that the majority simply could not take it. Philip, besides objecting to the responsibility entailed in withholding information, argued that it was an unjustified presumption on the part of a doctor to attempt to decide for people whether they could stand the truth. Dr. Somers assured him that he would change his opinion in time, and as he had not the temperament that carries such an idea to the bitter end, he usually followed Somers' advice with Somers' patients, and admitted that it often worked to advantage.

"Did Mary ever get over her sulks?" Somers asked, dismissing the subject of the nervous Mr. Brown.

Philip had taken Mary to call on the Somers the day before. Mary Roberts, the wife of his closest friend in St. Louis, was visiting them with her little girl, Joan. Philip had been used to spending his week-ends with the Roberts, and Joan remembered him with enthusiasm. Mary turned sulky the moment he picked Joan up, and went off in a corner by herself, refusing to be appeased for the duration of their visit.

"I guess she got over it after a fashion," Philip said. "If I hadn't known so many grown people just like her, I'd think she would outgrow it. But as it is—" he shrugged, leaving the sentence unfinished.

Somers nodded. "Sheila, for instance."

"Sheila wasn't just like that," Philip said slowly, trying to think what the difference was.

"No," the doctor assented. "Sheila's egocentric, rather, than jealous. But Mary's jealousy may not be very fundamental. She has never learned to share attention, and she may not be very sure of you. It might be as well for you to concentrate on her pretty exclusively until she gets more accustomed to you and takes you more for granted."

"I suppose so," Philip's tone was not very confident, and Somers looked at him thoughtfully. "You are thinking that is just what you have been doing? I guess maybe I was wrong there. You shouldn't let her get too attached to you. But you can't do much about it as long as you're all she has. She should have a mother and a few brothers and sisters. The next best thing, I suppose, would be for you to marry again."

"What good would that do?" Mary really would be jealous then."

"She might not. Anyway, she'd get over it better now than later." The doctor got up heavily. "I must be getting old, handing out this kind of advice. I'm sure I never used to."

Philip smiled at last. "Thanks, all the same. I'll think about what you've said."

He did think about it. It was true, as Anne had suggested, that he hadn't known before Mary's display of jealousy over Billy, that she cared enough about him to harbor such feelings, and it had occurred to him since that Mary probably hadn't known it herself. She was showing him enough affection now, but if she was going to consider him her private property—?

He should make her sure of him, and at the same time not let her get too attached to him. Somers had said. Now just how was he to manage that?

It was a nice problem, but when he returned home that evening he was forcibly reminded that it was not the only one she presented—at least not to Mrs. Lane—for Mrs. Lane, as he saw through the door connecting his room with Mary's was trying to get Mary into a dress she did not want to put on.

"What's the trouble?" he asked. "I hate this old dress."

"She doesn't want to wear anything but her new zipper dresses, and she has only one clean for school tomorrow," Mrs. Lane's tone showed how tired she was of the subject. She was fastening the last button when Mary jerked away from her and the button came off in her hand. As Mary flounced around in the peculiarly exasperating manner of children, Mrs. Lane lifted her hands in a gesture of defeat, and, with an expressive glance at Philip, which he returned with a grimace, she left the room.

Mary stood still, looking after her. "You old fool," she said distinctly.

Philip looked at her a moment in silence. "Mary," he said finally in a tone of complete distaste, "when you act like that, you make me sorry I didn't leave you with your grandmother."

He did not wait to see the effect of his words, but turned back into his room. There ain't no justice, he thought, dropping down in the big chair by the window. The one who had spoiled her should be the one to have to put up with her. What a day!

He was tired, and the room was pleasantly cool. After a while he picked up a magazine and thumbed through it idly until he found an article that looked interesting. He did not know Mary had come in until she touched his arm. Her eyes had the wide, solemn look they had sometimes, and her lips were trembling as she held up a finger for his inspection.

"A splinter?" He lifted her on to his lap and reached for his bag. "We don't need a surgical needle exactly, but it's all I have."

She bent her head with his as he picked carefully at the little sliver of wood caught under the skin. He could feel her heart pounding, but she did not whimper.

He held her tight for a minute after it was out, his chin resting on her hair. She was so little. He had her where he could take care of her. That was all he needed to bother about.

She twisted around presently and looked up at him. "Are you still sorry, Philip?"

"Sorry about what?"

"Sorry you didn't leave me with my grandma?"

"Oh—, I guess not." That was a nice thing to have said to her, he told himself reproachfully, a fine way to make her sure of him. It had also been the quickest way to bring her round.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up just in time to see a great C. & O. freight train fully loaded with coal and headed north, the first since John L. Lewis walked out on 130,000,000 Americans in favor of his 400,000 miners. And a great sight it was. Drank my morning coffee with great relish and then cranked the wagon for the downtown trip.

Saw Guy Pettit and the great buck deer he brought back from his gunning trip to Pennsylvania. Last year Guy went to Canada and came back empty handed for the first time in his hunting career. This year he returned to his old stamping grounds and with his usual success. And met Pop Betz who went along on the hunting trip with Guy. And—of all things—just to rest. No tramping through the cold woods with a heavy gun for Pop. He spent his days reading and lolling in his room and discussing the day with hunters at night. Smart. Guy shot his deer about 10:30 in the morning and finally trudged into camp with it about 4. Ever try to pack a 200 pound deer up and down mountains for miles and miles. Don't. That really is work.

What do you know about the Bill of Rights? Only about two out of every ten Americans know anything about it. So found a University of Denver research board. Of all the Americans interviewed 31 percent never had heard of it, 36 percent had heard of it, but had no idea what it was and 12 percent gave confused, unsatisfactory or entirely incorrect identifications. Examples: "Woman suffrage," "Prohibition." "It's the best thing that ever happened, but I don't know what it says." And we are supposed to be intelligent.

Walter Havinghurst, professor of English at Miami university and author of several books, is out with a new one, "Land of Promise," and in it Circleville commands great attention. The book is the story of the earliest days to the present time, of the Northwest Territory. Tells about the early Circleville before the circle was squared.

Down the street and met up with Frank Susa who served as coffee host. Talked over problems of the world and arrived at the conclusion that if affairs ever are straightened out that Christ must return to earth. And agreed on Senator Byrd as possibly the strongest presidential candidate the Democrats could offer. I could vote for him with real pleasure. But not for the confused county commissioner now in command or for any of the other "big names" of New Deal politics.

Chatted with Earl Smith and Joe Adkins, the barristers, and waved to Clarence Wolf as he and his wife took off on a trailer trip to Florida. Hope he spends the Winter there. Needs it. Checked the remaining shopping days until Christmas and decided that the time is here to start buying. There's an idea really worth while if I only will put it into effect. Which I probably won't. Get a lot of fun out of the last minute crush and through long years have learned many a buying trick that would be lost in these days of easy shopping. And, too, if anyone gets a present from me I want him to understand that while I may not have put a lot of thought into the purchase I sure did put a lot of effort. A lot, that is.

Jaundice in a Newborn Baby

By HERMAN N. BUDESEN, M.D.

THE mother of a new-born infant is quick to be alarmed. Anything the least bit out of the way in the baby's appearance upsets and worries her. Thus, if baby develops a condition known as physiologic jaundice—as one out of three young babies may do—mother's sufferings are likely to be greater than the child's.

For this type of jaundice, though it appears like any other and is characterized by the same signs—a greenish-yellow discoloration of the skin—is harmless and usually clears up without treatment in a week or so. True, baby may be a bit drowsy when the disorder is at its height, and may eat poorly, but when it disappears he will suffer no bad effects.

Shouldn't Be Neglected

This does not mean that jaundice in the new-born should ever be neglected or taken for granted. Far from it, because jaundice may be due to other and more serious conditions. For example, it may in some instances be the sign of severe infection which must be dealt promptly if the baby's life is to be saved. Such an infection may get into the body through the navel and spread to the liver. The liver becomes enlarged while the veins in the skin of the abdomen are prominent and noticeable. The abdomen is swollen or distended and the child is quite ill. The usual treatment for this condition consists of giving penicillin or one of the sulfonamide drugs depending on the germs causing the difficulty.

Unfortunately, from time to time, a baby may be born with some malformation of the bile ducts. The babies in such cases develop jaundice which usually does not attract attention until after the second week of life.

Diagnosis of Condition

If the blocking of the ducts is complete, the babies' bowel movements are white in color while the urine is dark, due to the bile in it. Once a diagnosis of this condition is made an operation is usually carried out in an attempt to rebuild the bile ducts and overcome the difficulty.

Prior to the operation vitamin K is given by injection under the skin because when there is no bile secretion this vitamin is not absorbed.

Nothing illustrates better than the various types of jaundice which may occur in the new-born the need for careful medical supervision. The jaundice may mean nothing, but on the other hand it may indicate a serious situation in which life itself is threatened and only careful study by a competent doctor can say which or determine what, in the individual case, is the most effective treatment.

That's easy—it has been replaced by the movies taken during vacation and which a guest finds 10 times more boring.

TYRANNY IN ARGENTINA

ARGENTINA has just taken over one of the worst practices of ancient Roman tyranny. Under the emperor Tiberius an informer could bring a charge of disloyalty against a respected citizen and ensure his arrest and punishment. This practice was known as "delation", from a Latin word meaning "informing." It was pernicious, allowing irresponsible people to get easy revenge for personal grudges.

The new Argentine arrangement sounds suspiciously similar. A bureau has been established under the Ministry of Commerce for information to deal with "malicious lies." There any signed statement denouncing some one else will be received. As Argentina is totalitarian, punishment is pretty sure to follow denunciation.

This gives Argentina a strong resemblance to the Fascist states.

The Constitution of the United States, Article V and VI of the Bill of Rights, the Ten Original Amendments proposed by Thomas Jefferson, with provision for open and speedy trial, confrontation with witnesses and counsel for defense, protects American citizens against that sort of thing. Argentina needs either new laws or strict application of old ones giving its citizens equal protection. Without such protection, dictatorship flourishes.

WORLD GOVERNMENT

THE idea of a world government as a peace weapon is gaining the attention of many thoughtful Americans. Among them, Justice Owen J. Roberts has drawn up a resolution which was passed by a recent convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church. It calls upon President Truman and the incoming Congress to consider "a stronger world government than the present UN", one where peace is maintained by law involving a legislative body whose representatives will be elected by all nations. Such a body's pronouncements would be interpreted by people's courts in every country. Enforcement of such laws would be in the hands of executives directly answerable to citizens of the various countries.

Whether one agrees in detail with the followers of the Roberts suggestion is not important. The encouraging thing is that people like Mr. Roberts and the Episcopalians are giving serious attention to some plan for world peace. If this object, namely, all nations at peace, is once fixed as essential, the details can be worked out and agreed upon, too.

They used to say women always go by contraries, but now the Russians are stealing their technique.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—The public call for action to protect it against union-made suffering has had—and this is the strange part of it—no leadership whatsoever.

Only one-fourth of the press had reached for congressional leadership by Dec. 1, says a weekly survey of newspaper opinion. (Twohey analysis). Only 7 per cent actually gave positive support for Mr. Truman in the Lewis coal strike procedure before the fine, while but 4 per cent more mixed censure and support, and 12 per cent blamed past "blundering administrations" for the trouble (I could name one.) The great remaining bulk wanted to do something fast but did not agree what.

The unions say the public should take it, accepting complete disruption of living even in a general strike (Oakland) or disruption of head in midwinter. Employers, through their National Association of Manufacturers convention leaned backward in modification. Specifically they passed the decision to congress, asking only revision of the Wagner act and abandonment of the closed shop, while mentioning some other things. Senator Byrd urged a special session immediately to act.

But the current official Republican weekly newspaper omits entirely mention of union legislation in a summary of predictions for coming congressional legislation, and clearly attempted no leadership.

The only suggestion list, approximating a remedial program, was offered by Senator Ball, but he received only a "one-sentence mention in the metropolitan press, saying he 'also spoke'" at the NAM convention and touched points he has advocated before.

This leaderless urge without a leader has grown up naturally as the result of what the unions have done. The public has simply lacked a champion. The issues have long grown out of the stage of employee-employer disputes into the national area involving a whole national economy and livelihood. It is the unions vs. the people and the people have been unled. Furthermore it is only natural public opinion has not centered on a remedial method because a great many defects of law have been noted, and the failure of the unions has been largely one of moral leadership. They have lost human consideration. They have not only become calloused in their tactics to suffering, impositions, and worse, disruptive brutal violations of human rights, but Lewis first challenged the government itself and then the court. You cannot legislate anyone into being decent, sensible or humane. From that fact stems the confusion as to what remedy could be effective.

A first thing then which might be attempted is to awaken union leadership to its moral responsibilities. A White House conference called by the President might or might not be successful in this respect.

The unions themselves have no more constructive leadership than the public, but if they attempted to exert some upon their own people, the best remedy against public suffering and a national breakdown of the economy might thus be put into effect.

FORGET THE VOID SUIT
HAVING a complete blank in the suit bid by your partner is not necessarily a reason for taking out his later call of a No Trump game into a rebiddable minor suit. If you have any appreciable high card strength in the suit or suits not bid by your side—and you know from your partner's No Trump try that he has something in it or them—you can forget the void suit. There probably will be enough tricks in your own suit and the unbid places to produce a game. The chance is likely to be better seeking nine tricks that way than hoping for the 11 needed in a minor suit.

North passed that part score bid, feeling properly that he had already done a good deal of talking with one king, one queen and one jack. South thought his own rebid of his higher-ranking suit at such a high level should have been treated by North as an absolute force, and was a bit disgruntled over not being in 5-Diamonds. But later he was glad of it, as a trump lead was followed by his losing two tricks in clubs and one in hearts.

After the last card was played and North knew what 13 cards South had held, he decided it was his turn to criticize. He based his criticism on South's having such strength in the only unbid suit of hearts, saying South should have left the 3-No Trumps in. No matter what East led against that, game would have been as easy as rolling off a log, with a likelihood of one extra trick and possibility of two, depending on the defense and the way North played.

SYNOPSIS

When Dr. Philip Balder and his wife, Sheila, decided divorce was the only solution to their incompatibility, Sheila, anxious to continue her business career in St. Louis, agreed Philip could have custody of their five-year-old daughter, Mary, who had lived in Colorado Springs with Sheila's mother since she was two. Philip, happy to have his small daughter again, comes to Denver to be the associate of Dr. Somers, but Mary, thoroughly spoiled by her grandmother, presents a problem to kindly Mrs. Lane, to whose boarding house they live. Among the Lane's other guests are attractive Anne Bowman and her friend, Joan Fay, owners of a local beauty shop; Roddy Malone, with whom Joan is in love, and elderly Mr. Gray. Had it not been for Anne's sympathetic understanding of Mary's problems, Philip would have had a difficult time curbing his unruly offspring.

Silly, Mrs. Lane's married daughter, leaves her small son, Billy, with her mother while she does some necessary shopping, and Mary, jealous of the attention to the boy, provokes a fight with him.

CHAPTER NINE

PHILIP WAS still discouraged as he sat at his desk considering the report on a routine examination he had given a patient of Dr. Somers. In a man of that age, of course, you could usually find something . . . a splintering of the Q R S wave in the electrocardiogram, an accentuated aortic, a pressure of 170 over 95 . . . He glanced up as Dr. Somers came in the room.

"I thought you'd gone, Philip," Somers said, dropping down in the chair beside the desk.

"I was just looking this over," Philip answered, laying the paper down.

Somers glanced at it. "What are you going to do with that? Not give it to anybody, I hope."

Philip sat back with a smile. "Why not?"

"Scare him to death, most likely." "Why should it scare a reasonable man?"

"Don't ask me; but it usually does."

"What would you do, tell him he's a hundred per cent?"

"Might as well; make him happy."

"Well, of course," Philip said, "I wasn't thinking of just throwing it at him without any explanations; but if anybody pays me his good money for an examination—"

"You're going to give it to him. All right, go ahead and we'll see how he takes it. Who is it anyway?"

Philip consulted the paper. "Josiah Brown."

"That old hypochondriac? He has been coming to me for examinations for ten years. I always give him a clean bill of health, and he is happy for another year. If you show him that report, he'll engage himself a hospital bed and never leave it likely."

"You wouldn't kid me, would you?" Philip asked suspiciously. "Absolutely not. You probably think you've met up with some queer specimens, but I guarantee you'll never encounter a queerer one than Josiah N. Brown."

Philip was convinced of his suspicion that Dr. Somers had not, on the whole, a great deal of respect for the human race, as such; and that his refusal to tell his patients the truth was based less on mercy than on a contemptuous conviction that the majority simply could not take it. Philip, besides objecting to the responsibility entailed in withholding information, argued that it was unjustified presumption on the part of a doctor to attempt to decide for people whether they could stand the truth. Dr. Somers assured him that he would change his opinion in time; and as he had not the temperament that carries such an idea to the bitter end, he usually followed Somers' advice with Somers' patients, and admitted that it often worked to advantage.

"Did Mary ever get over her sulks?" Somers asked, dismissing the subject of the nervous Mr. Brown.

Philip had taken Mary to call on the Somers the day before. Mary Roberts, the wife of his closest friend in St. Louis, was visiting them with her little girl, Joan. Philip had been used to spending his week-ends with the Roberts, and Joan remembered him with enthusiasm. Mary turned sulky at the moment he picked Joan up, and went off in a corner by herself, refusing to be appeased for the duration of their visit.

"I guess she got over it after a fashion," Philip said. "If I hadn't known so many grown people just like her, I'd think she would outgrow it. But as it is—"

he shrugged, leaving the sentence unfinished.

Somers nodded. "Sheila, for instance."

"Sheila wasn't just like that," Philip said slowly, trying to think what the difference was.

"No," the doctor assented. "Sheila's egocentric, rather than jealous. But Mary's jealousy may not be very fundamental. She has never learned to share attention, and she may not be very sure of you. It might be as well for you to concentrate on her pretty exclusively until she gets more accustomed to you and takes you more for granted."

"I suppose so," Philip's tone was not very confident, and Somers looked at him thoughtfully. "You are thinking that is just what you have been doing? I guess maybe I was wrong there. You shouldn't let her get too attached to you. But you can't do much about it as long as you're all she has."

"No," the doctor assented. "Sheila's egocentric, rather than jealous. But Mary's jealousy may not be very fundamental. She has never learned to share attention, and she may not be very sure of you. It might be as well for you to concentrate on her pretty exclusively until she gets more accustomed to you and takes you more for granted."

"I suppose so," Philip's tone was not very confident, and Somers looked at him thoughtfully. "You are thinking that is just what you have been doing? I guess maybe I was wrong there. You shouldn't let her get too attached to you. But you can't do much about it as long as you're all she has."

"You're going to give it to him. All right, go ahead and we'll see how he takes it. Who is it anyway?"

Philip consulted the paper. "Josiah Brown."

"That old hypochondriac? He has been coming to me for examinations for ten years. I always give him a clean bill of health, and he is happy for another year. If you show him that report, he'll engage himself a hospital bed and never leave it likely."

probably hadn't known it herself. She was showing him enough affection now, but if she was going to consider him her private property—

He should make her sure of him, and at the same time not let her get too attached to him. Somers had said. Now just how was he to manage that?

It was a nice problem, but when he returned home that evening he was forcibly reminded that it was not the only one she presented—at least not to Mrs. Lane—for Mrs. Lane, as he saw through the door connecting his room with Mary's, was trying to get Mary into a dress she did not want to put on.

"What's the trouble?" he asked. "I hate this old dress."

"She doesn't want to wear anything but her new zipper dresses, and she has only one clean for school tomorrow," Mrs. Lane's tone showed how tired she was of the subject. She was fastening the last button when Mary jerked away from her and the button came off in her hand. As Mary flounced around in the peculiarly exasperating manner of children, Mrs. Lane lifted her hands in a gesture of defeat, and, with an expressive glance at Philip, which he returned with a grimace, she left the room.

Mary stood still, looking after her. "You old fool," she said distinctly.

Philip looked at her a moment in silence. "Mary," he said finally in a tone of complete distaste, "when you act like that, you make me sorry I didn't leave you with your grandmother."

He did not wait to see the effect of his words, but turned back into his room. There ain't no justice, he thought, dropping down in the big chair by the window. The one who had spoiled her should be the one to have to put up with her. What a day!

He was tired, and the room was pleasantly cool. After a while he picked up a magazine and thumbed through it idly until he found an article that looked interesting. He did not know Mary had come in until she touched his arm. Her eyes had the wide, solemn look they had sometimes, and her lips were trembling as she held up a finger for his inspection.

"A splinter?" He lifted her on to his lap and reached for his bag. "What don't you have a surgical needle exactly, but it's all I have."

She bent her head with his as he picked carefully at the little sliver of wood caught under the skin. He could feel her heart pounding, but she did not whimper.

He held her tight for a minute after it was out, his chin resting on her hair. She was so little. He had her where he could take care of her. This was all he needed to bother about.

She twisted around presently and looked up at him. "Are you still sorry, Philip?"

"Sorry about what?"

"Sorry you didn't leave me with my grandma?"

"O—h, I guess not." That was a nice thought to have said to her, he told himself reproachfully, a fine way to make her sure of him. It had also been the quickest way to bring her round.

Mrs. Marion's Class Has Christmas Party

Miss Stout Reads Paper; Reports Are Heard

Twenty-eight members of Mrs. Marion's Sunday school class attended the annual Christmas party held Monday evening in the home of Mrs. Ned Griner, North Court street.

For the event the home was decorated with evergreen and the mantel banked with pine bows interspersed with cones and lighted by red candles.

Mrs. Griner, president, conducted the business session. Mrs. Stanley Cline reported on the activities of the Girl Scout troop which is sponsored by the class. Mrs. Dwight Steele read a letter from Mrs. George Marion in which she wished all members a "Merry Christmas" and stated that it was the first party of the group she had missed in the 35 years of its existence. Mr. and Mrs. Marion recently moved to Celina where they are making their home.

Miss Ruth Stout conducted the devotionals and led the group in singing, "Oh Come All Ye Faithful." She presented a paper on Christmas and offered a reading from the scripture.

A social period followed during which games were played with Miss Eloise Hilyard and Mrs. Berman Wertman as prize winners. Guests were seated at small tables lighted by red and green tapers. A dessert course was served and gifts were exchanged.

Hostesses for the occasion included Mrs. John Magill, Mrs. Edgar McClure, Mrs. Herschel Hill, Miss Peggy Parks, and Miss William Phebus. The January meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Harold Pontius, North Pickaway street.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick Hostess To Club

Mrs. McKinley Kirkpatrick, Washington C. H., entertained members of her bridge club, Saturday afternoon, for their annual Christmas party. The home was decorated with several lighted Christmas trees and traditional appointments.

A miniature lighted tree and several Santa Claus's centered the long table where the guests assembled for the dessert course. Mrs. Kirkpatrick was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Edward Cobb, Washington C. H.

Bridge was played during the afternoon with prizes awarded to Mrs. Ulin McGhee and Mrs. Wendell Evans. Members of the club that attended the party were, Mrs. Forrest Bottenfield, Mrs. Harold Slagel, Washington C. H., Mrs. Van Meter Hulise, Mrs. Paul Ater, Mrs. George McGhee, Mrs. George Betts, Mrs. Charles Drake, Mrs. Cecil Creighton, Mrs. Robert Buck, Mrs. Ward Dean, and Mrs. Paul Peck, from Atlanta community.

Degrees Conferred At Pomona Meeting

Officers of Pomona grange conferred the fifth degree on candidates in Scioto township school, Commercial Point, Monday evening.

A business meeting followed and refreshments were served to the large crowd in attendance. Candidates were present from Scioto, Nebraska and Star granges.

The next meeting of Pomona grange will be held the second Saturday in February with Mt. Pleasant granges as hosts for the occasion.

Circleville High School To Furnish Opposition Tonight; First Game At 7:30

Ashville gym will be filled early tonight when Circleville and Ashville teams clash in the renewal of a basketball rivalry that dates back many years.

Players on both teams are set to score a victory tonight. The CHS Tigers want to bring their record up to .500 and they would like nothing better to than to get their second victory at the expense of their county rivals.

Ashville's team is undefeated and the boys want to keep their record clean. In addition to the fact that they always want to win from Circleville.

Reserve teams of the two schools are scheduled to meet at 7:30 p. m. with the varsity contest following.

Coach John Daugherty probably will use Bob Steele, "Skeet" Smallwood, Bob Eccard, Dean Smallwood and Bob McCoy. Other regular members of the squad also are expected to see plenty of action.

Coach L. W. Fullen probably will stick with his lineup of Don Thomas, Bill and Jerry Trego, Ronnie Helise and Bob Glick.

Clowning House Of David 5 Meets Columbus Team Here Wednesday

Basketball fans are promised two fast games Wednesday night when the first pro game in many years is presented in Roll and Bowl.

In the feature attraction the House of David and Columbus Pros will meet. A preliminary game at 7:30 p. m. between Eshelman Feeds and Clarksburg is planned.

The House of David team features good basketball and quite a bit of clowning. The team has appeared here several years ago and fans always saw a good show.

The portion of the sect from which the basketball team comes from was established at Benton Harbor, Michigan by King Ben Purnell now several years dead, who called himself the second Messiah and led his congregation in establishing an almost independent colony in Michigan which has its own factories, industries, stores, hotels and even their own street cars, railways and buses in which funds are derived to further the teachings of the Sect.

House of David Basketball players are famous for their antics, ball handling ability and the entertainment they give out while the game is in progress. They have been touring the United States, Canada and Mexico for the last 25 years playing 200 games per season. Their record for the past five years is games played 1,012 and of the amount played the House of David has won 908 games and lost 104.

The Bearded beauties are headed by two veteran guards who are athletes the year around, playing professional baseball in the summer and basketball in the winter, first on the list is Bill Steinecke basketballs greatest clown and long shot, who is a 12 year veteran with the House of David team. Steinecke was a catcher last year for the New York Yankees and has played major league baseball with both the Detroit Tigers and the Pittsburgh Pirates. "Ham" Hamilton a college man has played nine years with the Davids and holds the worlds record for the most complete consecutive games played, this record is 1,643 games without a minutes rest. Gordon Burgett 6 ft. 3 inch forward hails from Illinois and is the high scorer of the team and has played five years with the House of David clan. At the other forward is Paul Short clever California college player who set a conference scoring record while in school. Short is 6 ft. 3 inches in height and is a one handed shot that marks all California basketball players. At center is Big Tom Faulkner 6 ft. 7 inch giant who tips the scales at 225 pounds and his specialty is the backboards on the defense and is the pivot man on offense. Faulkner hails from Ohio and is a threat for basketball best center.

Two other Ohio teams broke even with non-state foes. Wilberforce swamped Fisk, 45 to 32, while Wilmington dropped its second game in three starts, 49-35 to Earlham.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 10—Powel Crosley, Cincinnati Reds major stockholder, denied today that he was interested in selling his share of the club despite reports that a syndicate had made offers to buy it.

"Permit me to reiterate what I said some time ago," Crosley said. "I like baseball. At the present time I have no intention of selling my stockholdings in the Reds."

Crosley said he had to "send out to get published copies of the report" before he knew of the supposed offer.

The syndicate of would-be purchasers was headed by Harry Hartman, former sports announcer now an advertising executive. Hartman said his group was prepared to incorporate with capital of a million dollars.

Leonard H. Shallet, attorney for the proposed syndicate, said it would post a $30,000 check as evidence of good faith.

Crosley was reported to hold 3,200 of 6,000 Reds shares. The radio and automobile executive had served as president of the club

SPORTS WRITERS TO STUDY CRIME

Juvenile Delinquency To Be Discussed At Conference In Washington

BY BILL CORUM

INS Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Along with other sports writers, we have been invited to a conference on juvenile delinquency in the office of the department of justice in Washington next Monday. Barring something unforeseen, we intend to be there because we believe this is the finest job sports can do in this country, and that no other group is as well equipped to do it.

The invitation from the attorney general explains the purpose of this meeting as briefly and completely as it can be done, so it might be a good idea to print it in order to give you an idea of what we are talking about.

This is the letter: "My Dear Mr. Corum — I would be glad to have you attend a conference of sports writers in the department of justice on the afternoon of December 16th.

"The Washington sports writers have suggested the formation of a national organization of sports writers and editors in an effort to formulate a program whereby millions of American youngsters can be brought more generally into clean sports and recreational activities.

"The recommendation for this conference is the outgrowth of the national conference on the prevention and control of juvenile delinquency which took place here on Nov. 20-22. I feel confident that such a gathering would result in a decided contribution to the general program adopted by the hundreds of civic organizations and public-spirited persons at the recent conference in their attack on juvenile delinquency.

"With the writers of sports organized into one nation-wide unit, the amount of good that can be accomplished in this field is incalculable.

"I hope you are in a position to accept this invitation and I am looking forward with pleasure to seeing and talking with you. Sincerely yours—Tom C. Clark."

MARCH OF DIMES GOAL OF $5,000 SET FOR COUNTY

Most Intensive Campaign To Raise Funds To Fight
Polio Is Planned

Efforts will be made to raise more than $5,000 in Pickaway county during the 15-day annual "March of Dimes" campaign which is to be staged Jan. 15 to 30.

This was announced Tuesday by Don Henkle, general chairman, who stated that a Saturday tag day will be held in Circleville during the drive. The quota for this county in the last campaign was $2,800 and Henkle said an attempt will be made to double that figure in the coming drive.

Plans for the campaign were discussed in a recent conference of Henkle with Edward Amey, head of the campaign committee in Circleville, and Mrs. Harriet Henness, chairman for the county.

Henkle said that Mayor Ben H. Gordon will be asked to issue a formal proclamation concerning the "March of Dimes" campaign and to authorize the tag day.

Although virtually every home in the city and county will be solicited by mail for donations to the "March of Dimes", Henkle explained, the drive will be centered in the schools. In addition all 4-H clubs, units of the Future Farmers of America, Granges, lodges, and all fraternal and civic groups will be asked to cooperate.

All school children and all teachers in the city and county, he asserted, will be urged to take an active part in the drive which will be the most energetic "March of Dimes" campaign ever waged in the community. It is under direction of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis which was founded by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Merchants, manufacturers, and professional men will also be asked to contribute and to cooperate in every way to put the drive "over the top" in the battle against infantile paralysis.

Henkle said that motion picture theaters will again aid by showing "trailers" on their screens and by permitting a group of women volunteers to take donations from the audiences.

NO DATES FOR JURY HEARING OF THEFT CASE

Just when the Pickaway county grand jury will examine the evidence in the series of Circleville burglaries including the $1,700 robbery of the American Legion and the $300 burglary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars was undetermined Tuesday.

County Prosecutor Kenneth Robbins said he had "no idea" when the next grand jury session will be called.

Howard G. Robinson, Newark private detective employed by Legionnaires to investigate the Nov. 9 burglary of their club rooms, and Police Chief William F. McCrady said there were no new developments in the roundup of a gang of alleged gunmen-burglars declared by the officers to be responsible for a long series of crimes in central Ohio. They said the gang headquartered in Circleville.

Two alleged ringleaders, Orin Diltz, 24, and George Clifton, 25, both of Route 4, Circleville, are in the county jail in default of $25,000 bond each awaiting grand jury action in connection with the Legion and VFW burglaries and other burglaries and thefts. Both pleaded not guilty before Mayor Ben H. Gordon on Dec. 6.

JACK GRANTED ABSENCE LEAVE FROM INDUSTRY

CLEVELAND, Dec. 10—William S. Jack began today a year's leave of absence as president of the Jack and Heintz Precision Industries, Inc., in Cleveland.

His temporary retirement, due to impaired health, was announced yesterday in New York at the conclusion of a regular meeting of stockholders.

A statement issued jointly by the famed industrial leader and board chairman Byron C. Foy, who will assume the president's duties during Jack's absence, denied that disagreement over personnel policies caused the move.

Earlier disagreements reported between Jack and the board came, he said, as a result of a misunderstanding on his part.

Both Jack and Foy maintained that they agreed on company poli-

Slaughter Claims Committee
Probing Surplus Property
Has Saved Millions

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—Rep. Slaughter (D) Mo., declared today that he would urge the new Republican-controlled house to continue and expand the investigation which his surplus property committee is now conducting.

The committee chairman estimated that his five-member group has saved the government $10,000,000 as a result of administrative changes made by the war assets administration following disclosures of inefficiency and mismanagement.

Slaughter said the WAA was plagued with an "inadequate and inefficient personnel" but had words of praise for its administrator, Lt. Gen. Robert M. Littlejohn.

The congressman termed Littlejohn an aggressive, hard-working administrator who was attempting to do his best with a difficult task.

Slaughter, who is ending four years in congress this month, said the committee would close its five-month-old investigation Friday, although subcommittee hearings will be held in St. Louis, Mo., and California.

The committee's report, now being drawn up by Hugh Wise, chief counsel, will be presented to congress later this month.

The committee was expected to recommend that, in addition to continuing the probe, a larger appropriation be made available to permit more investigators to be hired.

PROGRAM TO AID SMALL BUSINESS IS PRESENTED

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 10—An eight point program to aid small business cushion the shock of a possible depression was being studied today by the Catholic conference on industrial problems.

The program was outlined to the conference by Wesley E. Sharer, Washington, a member of the executive board of the new council of American business. He said that the nation's three million small businesses are "seriously concerned about inflationary distortions that threaten an economic blowup in the near future."

Sharer recommended:
Emergency cost-of-living wage adjustments to halt the wave of strikes; tax reductions on smaller incomes; adequate credits and loans for small business; increases in minimum wages from 40 to 65 cents an hour and increases in social security benefits; priorities to small business in the acquisition of surplus property; further anti-trust legislation to curb monopolies; expansion of the department of commerce's technical service to small business, and increased government aid to help small business compete for foreign trade.

MARCH OF DIMES GOAL OF $5,000 SET FOR COUNTY

Most Intensive Campaign To Raise Funds To Fight
Polio Is Planned

Efforts will be made to raise more than $5,000 in Pickaway county during the 15-day annual "March of Dimes" campaign which is to be staged Jan. 15 to 30.

This was announced Tuesday by Don Henkle, general chairman, who stated that a Saturday tag day will be held in Circleville during the drive. The quota for this county in the last campaign was $2,800 and Henkle said an attempt will be made to double that figure in the coming drive.

Plans for the campaign were discussed in a recent conference of Henkle with Edward Arney, head of the campaign committee in Circleville, and Mrs. Harriet Henness, chairman for the county.

Henkle said that Mayor Ben H. Gordon will be asked to issue a formal proclamation concerning the "March of Dimes" campaign and to authorize the tag day.

Although virtually every home in the city and county will be solicited by mail for donations to the "March of Dimes", Henkle explained, the drive will be centered in the schools. In addition all 4-H clubs, units of the Future Farmers of America, Granges, lodges, and all fraternal and civic groups will be asked to cooperate.

All school children and all teachers in the city and county, he asserted, will be urged to take an active part in the drive which will be the most energetic "March of Dimes" campaign ever waged in the community. It is under direction of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis which was founded by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Merchants, manufacturers, and professional men will also be asked to contribute and to cooperate in every way to put the drive "over the top" in the battle against infantile paralysis.

Henkle said that motion picture theaters will again aid by showing "trailers" on their screens and by permitting a group of women volunteers to take donations from the audiences.

Obituary

OBITUARY

Ell Nelson Hinton, son of Jacob and Leanna Cox Hinton, was born in Hocking county, Ohio, May 21, 1871 and died at his home in Circleville, Ohio, Nov. 30th, 1946, age 75 years, 6 months, 2 days. Mr. Hinton was twice married first to Miss Martha Loftis, who died many years ago leaving him with four small children. He was again married to Miss Winnie Rains who died twelve years ago.

He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Rhoda Coey of Hallsville, three sons C. J. Hinton of Tarleton, Dayton, Hinton of Columbus and Pearl Hinton of Circleville; twelve grandchildren; seven great grandchildren; one sister, Mrs. Della McAfee of Marion, Ohio and many other relatives and friends.

Mr. Hinton was a teamster and farmer by trade, having been engaged in farming with the late John Reichelderfer of Tarleton for several years, coming to Circleville in 1923. He was of a quiet disposition, making friends wherever he went. He was wonderfully kind and gave his heart to God several weeks ago. He always attended church service whenever his health would permit.

Life's race well run; Life's work well done; now comes rest.

SHOULD YOU GO FIRST
Should you go first and I remain to walk the road alone,
I'll live in memory's garden, dear,
With happy days and happy hours,
In Spring I'll wait for roses red,
When fades the lilac blue,
In early fall when brown leaves fall,
I'll catch a glimpse of you.

"Should you go first and I remain for battles to be fought,
Each thing you've touched along the way
Will be a hallowed spot.
I'll hear your voice, I'll see your smile,
Though blindly I may grope,
The memory of your helping hand
Will buoy me on with hope.

"Should you go first and I remain to finish with the scroll,
No lengthening shadows shall creep
To make this life seem dull,
We've known so much of happiness,
We've had our cup of joy,
And memory is one gift of God
That death cannot destroy.

"Should you go first and I remain, One thing I'd have you do:
Walk slowly down the path of death,
For soon I'll follow you,
I'll want to know each step you take
That I may walk the same,
For some day down that lonely road
You'll hear me call your name."

CARD OF THANKS
The children of the late Ell Nelson Hinton and Mrs. Mary M. Staray wish to thank the neighbors and friends who so kindly helped at the sickness and after the death of our dear father and friend, especially do we thank the Rev. O. L. Ferguson, the Whitte funeral home for their efficient services and the pallbearers and the choir for their beautiful songs.

"Tropic Lightning" They Call It

And well named is the U. S. Army
25th Infantry Division. Its crushing blows on Guadalcanal, New Georgia, Vella Lavella and Luzon are proof enough. Any man can be proud to wear the insignia of this famed division.

And a picked group of fine young men are going to be given this opportunity when they enlist in the U. S. Army for 3 years. Further, after initial training in the U. S., they will be stationed right with the "Tropic Lightning" Division amid the world-famous scenic attractions of Japan.

In addition to all-important occupation duties, there are many other activities to make life interesting for men of the 25th. Swimming pools, golf courses, tennis courts, baseball diamonds and clubs are theirs to use. Sightseeing is encouraged. Living quarters are excellent.

And starting base pay for Privates overseas is $90 a month. Up to $397 a month for First Sergeants.

OPERATION HIGH JUMP • Admiral Byrd's Antarctic-Bound Flotilla • Dwarfs All Previous Exploring Expeditions

Adm. Richard E. Byrd

By JOHN F. SEMBOWER
Written Exclusively for Central Press and this newspaper

Capt. Richard Cruzen

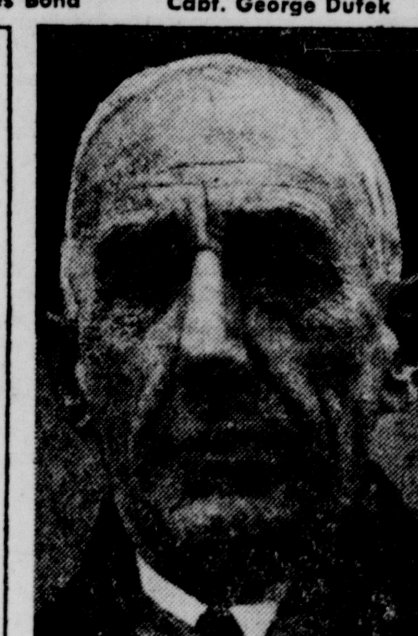

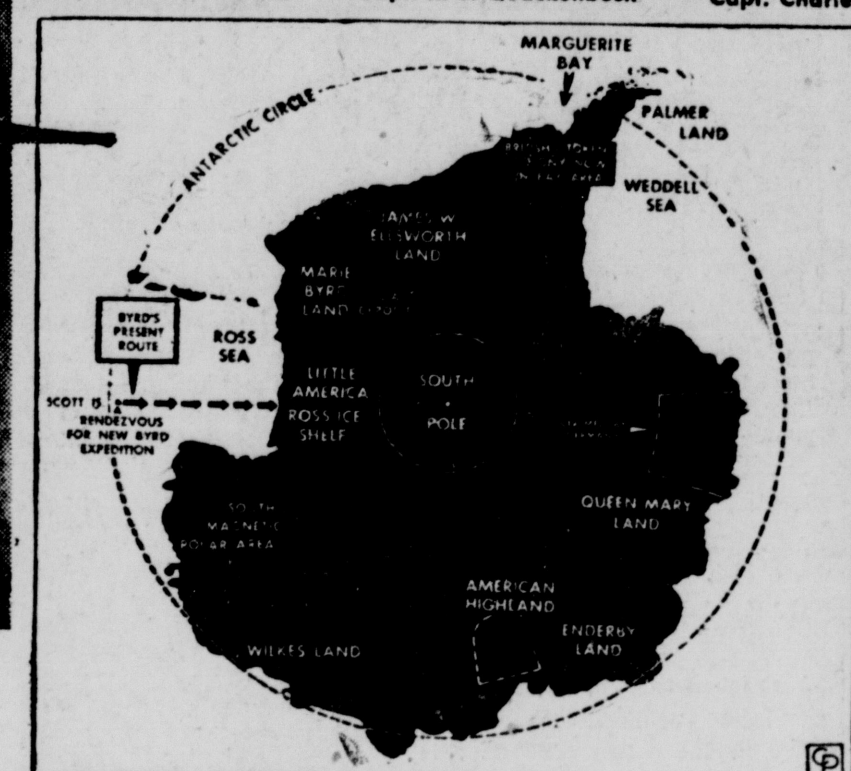

Capt. R. S. Quackenbush

Capt. Charles Bond

Capt. George Dufek

Roald Amundsen

the nethermost points of the earth,
he never has been a "stunt man."
Careful and laborious preparation are his keynotes, including his own personal preparation which started in 1919 when he directed the Navy's pioneering plans for post-World War I transoceanic flights.

His year spent in the frozen fastness of the Antarctic winter at Little America contributed one of the world's outstanding pieces of direct scientific observation. It seems natural for him now to head an expedition which has for a prime objective searching out possible sources of uranium, the precious metal of the atomic age.
Modest and never a showoff,
Byrd nevertheless enjoys a unique reputation among his associates
for personal valor and heroism.
His three companions on the flight to France credited their survival
after the crash landing to his cool generalship. Once he unhesitatingly plunged into the icy South Pacific ocean to rescue a man overboard.

50 Expeditions Since 1739

It is nothing new to try to penetrate the Antarctic, however, for since 1739, when Pierre Bouvet of France first tried to enter it, there have been 51 expeditions. This is compared with 146 expeditions since the dawn of history into the North Polar regions, starting with an amazing ancient Greek, Pytheas, who in 325 B. C. is believed, to have reached the 70th parallel.

Byrd's accomplishments so completely overshadow all the rest in the Antarctic that it frequently is overlooked that he stands almost alone as an American explorer in that area. The only others were Lieut. Charles Wilkes in 1838-42,
Benjamin Morrell in 1823, and the Pendleton-Palmer expedition of 1820-22.

England, France, Russia, Germany, Norway, Belgium, Sweden,
Scotland, Australia and even Japan have been entrants in the competition to unlock the hidden treasures believed to lie there, and England has set the pace with no less than 23 excursions, including the famous R. F. Scott exploration of 1910-13 when he and Amundsen personally duelled for the super-distinction of getting to the Pole first.

Byrd, now 58, was reported to be on the verge of retirement when the possibility of this year's grand effort appeared on the horizon. But those who hinted he might direct the expedition in absentia and not actually go along did not figure on the spirit of the intrepid explorer nor the prime characteristic of Byrd which is to take the lead.

of disputes through collective bargaining, (B) the federal government should only intervene in cases involving public interest and (C)
the employers should have equal justice with employees under law.
This is not a dynamic recommendation, might get away from the Case bill proposal of labor courts for settlement of disputes, would enlarge the labor department conciliation services and possibly throw the whole question back into the realm of commercial negotiation. A period of delay for strikes involving public necessities like coal, oil, steel, transportation and communications was advocated.
Stoppage of strikes in electricity,
gas and water would be prohibited.

Personally I believe the Republican leadership should call the meeting, public or private, of government, unions and employers and insist upon acceptance of a regulation program which would be effective, which would be aimed solely to protect public justice—the simplest basic principles of it—without being punitive to the short-sighted union leaders. Agreement would get conformance. I think Senator Taft, Speaker-To-Be Martin, Carroll Reece and some other Republican directors could accomplish more than a White House conference, simply because they

From this analysis of the factual condition also you may conclude a special session of congress (which contains the latest nationally elected public officials) should be called as Byrd demands. Congress is fresh from the people.
They must be entrusted with responsibility to which they were elected. The administration just does not seem to be able to do much in any respect aside from the field of nonpartisan foreign policy.
Housing administrator Wyatt now has quit, for instance, because Mr.
Truman sided with George Allen of ings over large loans for housing projects demanded by Wyatt—not helping the housing situation which was bad anyway.

Now the unreported Ball speech put forward 3 principles for congressional action: (A) settlement

OPERATION HIGH JUMP • Admiral Byrd's Antarctic-Bound Flotilla
Dwarfs All Previous Exploring Expeditions

Adm. Richard E. Byrd

Written Exclusively for Central Press and this newspaper

THE CURRENT BYRD expedition to Antarctica writes a new and stirring chapter in the 10-century history of modern exploration. The mammoth invasion of one of the few remaining patches of the earth's surface not thoroughly trampled by adventurous men promises to vault its leader, Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd, many notches higher on his already lofty perch as the greatest of explorers.

Never has an expedition compared in size and scope with the ambitious venture launched by the United States Navy with 12 large vessels, manned by 4,000 officers and men, leaving from Norfolk, Va., San Diego, Cal., and San Pedro, Cal.

Probably the aggregate of 30 ships and land parties which penetrated the North Polar regions between 1846-53 in futile search for the lost Sir John Franklin is the nearest thing in size to the present undertaking. But it was not the coordinated effort that the Byrd expedition of 1946-47 promises to be.

Science Stressed Now
Although the gigantic effort certainly will provide its share of the old-time adventure that always has marked Arctic and Antarctic dashes, there also is an element of deliberate and calculated scientific planning which was impossible in the days when Roald Amundsen of Norway beat Capt. R. F. Scott of England to the South Pole by only 34 days. Peary won the race to the North Pole, and Byrd became the first man to fly over the top of the world just three days before Amundsen.

The central "task force" of what the Navy has named "Operation High Jump" includes the flag ship, a headquarters communication ship, the Coast Guard ice-breaker Northwind, the Navy ice-breaker Burton Island, two cargo ships, the Yancey and Merrick, and an ultra-modern submarine, the Zennett.

The smaller east and west groups are composed each of a sea plane tender, an oiler, and a destroyer. The great explorers of the past, such as Fernando Magellan and Christopher Columbus, would stand aghast at such a formidable flotilla, yet the crushing ice and the perils of the intense cold cause its leaders to consider it probable that the array of steel and wings will not escape unscathed.

Leadership of the all-out assault on the Antarctic reflects the experienced personnel that Byrd himself has developed in past expeditions.

Capt. Richard H. Cruzen of Galatin, Mo., second in command of the Byrd expedition of 1939-41, heads the largest group.

Capt. George F. Dufek of Rockford, Ill., naval aviator and a member of the earlier Byrd entourage, commands the east group. A comparative newcomer, Capt. Charles A. Bond of Philadelphia, who was case-hardened by the rigorous Aleutian campaign of World War II, is the third chief.

A hanger of war-time secrecy kept the vast project from public view during its months of preparation, and only after word began to leak out from those selected for duty was an official announcement made a little over a month ago.

However, the military strategy of the maneuver has been soft-pedaled by Vice-Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, deputy chief of naval operations, and Byrd. They admit that the expedition will try to determine whether the southern polar cap has significance in the long-term national defense plan of the United States, but stress that commercial and scientific implications probably will be the most important.

Another important aspect of the quick plunge into the Antarctic, which will take advantage of the polar summer by driving toward the objectives in January and trying to complete the withdrawal by February, will be to strengthen United States territorial claims in the region.

This dramatizer the fact that other nations already are in the race, Chile, spurred by reports of the Byrd plans, is rushing a fleet of ships and seaplanes which will try to nail down that country's claims to a large portion of the new continent's 4,500,000 square miles, 2,250,000 of which still are unexplored.

At least 14 British and Norwegian whaling expeditions, manned by an estimated 10,000 sailors and including the super-modern British Balaena, a 14,000-ton factory ship equipped with navigational and depth-sound devices, are ready to leave South African ports for the rich haul of fats and oils.

In addition, the British, with the same characteristic colonizing persistence that enabled them to win out in the exploration of North America, have succeeded in maintaining throughout the war years a virtual colony at Marguerite Bay.

These British claims, which do not impinge on Byrd's famous base at Little America, may conflict with some United States claims, since this country has adopted a policy, stated by Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes in 1924, that mere exploration does not establish a formal claim. The British "colony" might meet the United States qualifications for recognition.

The United States is the only country with its finger deep in the Antarctic pie that has not staked out formal claims. Britain claims the Falkland Islands Dependency; France has figuratively posted the Tri-Color ensign over the territory visited in 1857 by D'Urville and named Adelle Land, and Norway and Argentina have served notice that they claim a share.

Byrd, exercising the geographical prerogative of explorers, however, already has left imprints on the maps by naming prominent features of the landscape after supporters of his past expeditions. These include the Rockefeller Range of mountains and the Franklin Roosevelt sea.

Many observers believe that the vast new undertakings can only give added luster to Byrd's record as an explorer which they credit not only with being one of the greatest living explorers but perhaps the greatest explorer of all time.

Only Amundsen of Norway and Byrd led expeditions to conquer both the North and South Poles, and Byrd is the only man to have flown over both. In addition, he has to his credit an epoch-making pioneer hop of the Atlantic in 1927.

Each exploit was filled with drama. When he circled the North Pole in 1926, he and his pilot, Floyd Bennett, flew nonstop 1,600 miles in 15 1/2 hours, a tremendous feat at the time. His flight across the Atlantic to Ver-sur-Mer, France, carried four passengers and covered 3,744 miles in 46 hours and six minutes before he had to wreck his plane just off shore as he exhausted his fuel blindly flying in a dense fog.

Floyd Bennett no longer was alive in 1929 when Byrd hopped 500 miles from his farthest outpost to the South Pole, so he named his tri-motor monoplane after him. The flight almost ended in disaster as the heavily loaded plane skimmed the 15,000-foot mountains that guard the final approaches to the Pole.

Although Byrd is tops in the international sweepstakes to reach the nethermost points of the earth, he never has been a "stunt man." Careful and laborious preparation are his keynotes, including his own personal preparation which started in 1919 when he directed the Navy's pioneering plans for post-World War I transoceanic flights.

His year spent in the frozen fastness of the Antarctic winter at Little America contributed one of the world's outstanding pieces of direct scientific observation. It seems natural for him now to head an expedition which has for a prime objective searching out possible sources of uranium, the precious metal of the atomic age.

Modest and never a showoff, Byrd nevertheless enjoys a unique reputation among his associates for personal valor and heroism. His three companions on the flight to France credited their survival after the crash landing to his cool generalship. Once he unhesitatingly plunged into the icy South Pacific ocean to rescue a man overboard.

50 Expeditions Since 1739
It is nothing new to try to penetrate the Antarctic, however, for since 1739, when Pierre Bouvet of France first pried into it, there have been 51 expeditions. This is compared with 146 expeditions since the dawn of history into the North Polar regions, starting with an amazing ancient Greek, Pytheas, who in 325 B. C. is believed to have reached the 70th parallel.

Byrd's accomplishments so completely overshadow all the rest in the Antarctic that it frequently is overlooked that he stands almost alone as an American explorer in that area. The only others were Lieut. Charles Wilkes in 1838-42, Benjamin Morrell in 1823, and the Pendleton-Palmer expedition of 1820-22.

England, France, Russia, Germany, Norway, Belgium, Sweden, Scotland, Australia and even Japan have been entrants in the competition to unlock the hidden treasures believed to lie there, and England has set the pace with no less than 23 excursions, including the famous R. F. Scott exploration of 1910-13 when he and Amundsen personally duelled for the superstition of getting to the Pole first.

Byrd, now 58, was reported to be on the verge of retirement when the possibility of this year's grand effort appeared on the horizon. But those who hinted he might direct the expedition in absentia and not actually go along did not figure on the spirit of the intrepid explorer nor the prime characteristic of Byrd which is to take the lead.

of disputes through collective bargaining, (B) the federal government should only intervene in cases involving public interest and (C) the employers should have equal justice with employees under law. This is not a dynamic recommendation, might get away from the Case bill proposal of labor courts for settlement of disputes, would enlarge the labor department conciliation services and possibly throw the whole question back into the realm of commercial negotiation. A period of delay for strikes involving public necessities like coal, oil, steel, transportation and communications was advocated. Stoppage of strikes in electricity, gas and water would be prohibited.

Personally I believe the Republican leadership should call the meeting, public or private, of government, unions and employers and insist upon acceptance of a regulation program which would be effective, which would be aimed solely to protect public justice—the simplest basic principles of life—without being punitive to the short-sighted union leaders. Agreement would get conformance. I think Senator Taft, Speaker-To-Be Martin, Carroll Reece and some other Republican directors could accomplish more than a White House conference, simply because they must act and Mr. Truman already advocated in the vetoing of the Case bill that he had no power to deal with the situation and left himself liable to just what happened.

Then if the union leaders will not cooperate with Republicans in the public interest, to prevent public suffering, to back up the government and the courts, to keep the nation going, to get behind production and work—if that is proved by a conference, the public can hardly demand that such shortsightedness be sustained perpetually, and we will come to the question of whether the unions do not need some new leadership elected, whether this current union leadership is to be broken or the people. Then you can pass any kind of legislation to make unions less and less important. The public then will have leadership.

HOLLYWOOD PLAYERS
Gregory Peck will star in the sophisticated comedy which scored a great hit on both stage and screen, "No Time For Comedy," on the "Hollywood Players" program, Tuesday, at 9:30 p. m. Peck will portray Gaylord Esterbrook, an ambitious young playwright from the West, whose first play is about the plushy Park Avenue set he has never seen. It's a hit, and he goes on to write more successful comedies. Then he marries Linda, star of his first play, and they come to New York, where he meets — and is almost completely ruined by — the Park Avenue set. How his career and marriage are provisionally saved from disintegration, provide a stirring climax.

Kiwanis Club Starts Drive To Collect Toys

NEEDY CHILDREN TO GET GIFTS FOR CHRISTMAS

New And Used Playthings May Be Left At Fire Station Before Holidays

Do you have any extra toys that could make some children happy? That was the question being asked of Circleville and Pickaway county residents Tuesday by members of the Circleville Kiwanis club.

In an effort to make Christmas 1946 a merry one for every child in the county, the club is staging a drive to collect toys for needy children in the county. Wanted are all the good used toys in the county and new ones which are no longer wanted by the owners.

They will be distributed at Christmas time to needy children, recommended by the juvenile court and the county and city health offices. For many years the Kiwanis club has held an annual Christmas party for children at the county home and has presented gifts to them. This year members hope to spread the yuletide cheer to private homes containing children who are living with parents who are not able to provide the playthings that all children enjoy.

Cooperating with the club, city firemen have agreed to accept the toys and keep them at the fire station until club members can distribute them. Those wishing to contribute toys may leave them at the fire station on East Franklin street.

Members of the committee stress the fact that no broken toys can be accepted. There are no facilities to repair them and there is not enough time before Christmas to have them ready for distribution. They point out that persons who have no children but want to help needy youngsters have a merry Christmas may purchase new toys and leave them at the fire station.

In charge of the drive are Dave Goldschmidt, Paul Hang, Irvin Reid and other members of the underprivileged children's committee of the Kiwanis club.

WALNUT SCHOOL SENIORS HOSTS TO KIWANIANS

Eighty-eight members of the Kiwanis club, wives and other guests attended a chicken dinner and program at Walnut township school Monday night.

The dinner was served by members of the senior class at Walnut. The proceeds will be used to help defray expenses of a trip they plan to take next Spring.

The program included three vocal solo numbers by Richard Valentine, Walnut music instructor, a vocal solo by Miss Mary Lou McCain, and a piano duet by Misses Elsiean Cromley and Jane Bell. Miss Cromley also served as accompanist for the vocal numbers.

Carl D. Bennett, superintendent of the school, welcomed the guests and introduced the musicians. President J. Wray Henry expressed the thanks of the club. Dave Goldschmidt explained details of the toy collection project planned by the underprivileged children's committee.

GRASS ON FIRE
Grass fire at the Henry Rhodes farm in Jackson township was extinguished by Circleville firemen Monday afternoon. Firemen said the loss was nominal.

SCOUTS STUDY HOLIDAY SAFETY DURING MEETING

Jack Kneese, officer of the day, opening the regular meeting of Boy Scout Troop 121 Monday night, with pledge of allegiance to the flag and the Scout oath and law.

Project for discussion was safety and 10 different phases of the subject were outlined. Safety at Christmas time was stressed and every Scout was told how to fireproof his Christmas tree in his home. They were told to use a solution of sulphate equal to one-fourth the weight of the tree and 1½ pints of water to each pound of sulphate. The tree should stand in this solution five to seven days.

Patrols elected leaders as follows: Pine Tree, Ray Denham; Lion, Jack Kneese; Leader, Richard Justice Bill Stout, senior patrol, was elected scribe. Each patrol made a safety report. The meeting was closed with the Scoutmasters benediction.

LLOYD SMITH IS HURT IN AUTO CRASH IN REICH

Cpl. Lloyd Smith, son of Mrs. Laura Smith, 130 York street, was severely injured in an auto-truck crash Thanksgiving night at Bad Abling, Germany, according to notification received Tuesday by Mrs. Smith.

A jeep driven by Cpl. Smith collided with a truck in a heavy fog, the notification said, and Cpl. Smith was removed to an Army hospital. His injuries include a left arm fracture, back injuries, fractures of two ribs, and numerous cuts and bruises.

Discharged from the Army after spending three years in the south Pacific theater of war Cpl. Smith re-enlisted in March, 1946, and was sent to Germany.

ARE BANKS MYSTERIOUS TO YOU?

You probably know your own business, profession, or trade from A to Z, and if you were to try to explain some features of it to a banker he might seem to you to be very "dumb."

Therefore, when the tables are turned and you encounter some banking rule or practice that you do not readily understand, do not feel embarrassed. Ask questions freely. We are always glad to explain any point that may not be clear to our friends.

In fact, we are greatly pleased when anyone shows enough interest in banking matters to want to know more.
